Biographical Note
José Ignacio Rodríguez (1831-1907) was a Cuban-American lawyer, writer, and teacher. Rodríguez left Cuba for political reasons, became an American citizen, and established himself in Washington, D.C., as a lawyer specializing in Latin American affairs. He studied law under Caleb Cushing and was admitted to the bar of the District of Columbia and the Supreme Court. He held the post of chief translator for the Bureau of American Republics and librarian of the Columbus Library. He served in various capacities for Mexico before the United States and Mexican Claims Commission, acted as secretary for the United States delegation to the International Congress of American States in Mexico in 1902, and was counsel for many claimants before several Spanish and American claims commissions, notably in the Antonio Mora, Julio Sanguily, and Delgado cases, and that of the Virginius affair.

Scope and Content Note
The papers of José Ignacio Rodríguez (1831-1907) span the years 1860-1907 and consist of correspondence, legal papers, notes, drafts, and other literary papers, newspaper clippings, and miscellany. The papers are in Spanish and English. The papers are organized into the following series: Correspondence, American Spanish Claims Commissions, United States and Venezuelan Claims Commission, Claims Against the Dominican Republic, Costa Rica and the United States Joint Commission, American-French Claims Commission, Claims Against the Military Government of Cuba, Bureau of American Republics, Legal Cases and Clients, Puerto Rico, Writings, Personal, Newspaper Clippings, and Other Papers.

The collection contains Rodríguez's legal papers and correspondence mostly concerning claims against the governments of Cuba and the Dominican Republic and cases involving individuals and governments before claims commissions. They include the Spanish and American Claims Commission, the French and American Claims Commission, the Joint Commission of Costa Rica and the United States, the United States and Mexican Claims Commission, and the Bureau of the American Republics. Case files in the American-Spanish Claims Commission treat Cuban political figures such as Néstor Ponce de León and Julio Sanguily and cases involving confiscation by Latin American governments of property of wealthy individuals such as Cuban immigrant Antonio Maximo Mora.

Other files pertain to individual litigations stemming from the legations of Chile, Colombia, Salvador, and Uruguay. Also in the collection are papers of the Legation of Salvador relating to the establishment of a legation in Washington, D.C. (1894), and to the extradition of Salvadorean refugees (1894-1895). The Other Papers series includes the papers of José Manuel Mestre (circa 1860-1870), the archives of the Real Sociedad Económica de Amigos del País, Cuba (1853-1869), and material relating to the Cuban Junta of New York (1868-1870).
