Arrangement

The collection is divided into five series. Series I: Manuscripts are divided into nine subseries of administrative materials that were used by the Luboml Exhibition Project office. Series II: Interviews on audiocassettes which were conducted between the years of 1973-2001. Series III: Photographic prints document the history of Luboml before its untimely destruction. Series IV: Moving Images contain various interviews and documentaries pertaining to life in Luboml. Series V: Administrative files for the Luboml Project. Series VI: The Luboml Exhibition Project collected donations from Luboml survivors and their descendants. These items were divided into what the organization classified as an artifact or a photograph. This distinction is not clearcut as there are some photographs within the artifacts. As a family donated material, they were assigned an number preceded by an "A."

Biographical Notes

In 1994, Aaron Ziegelman organized a research project that engaged archivists, anthropologists and historians in the collection, preservation and analysis of information about Jewish life in his birthplace, Luboml, a shtetl (market town) in Poland, whose Jewish community was destroyed in World War II. Luboml, Libivne in Yiddish, is now within the national borders of Ukraine. This documentary collection resulted in a major traveling exhibition, a book, and a documentary film about everyday life in Luboml during the years between World War I and World War II.

Scope and Content

Collection of audio and video recordings of oral histories with family members of people from Luboml, Poland conducted from 1994-2000, with transcripts of these interviews; original photographs; photographs copied from the personal archives of these family members and from other archives; original passports, immigration papers, letters (including letters of the Eiger and Ziegelman families), product labels, a few artifacts, one original 8 mm film shot in Luboml, circa 1932; and transparencies of maps of Luboml. The collection includes video and audio footage from the production of the documentary film, Luboml: My Heart Remembers (2002), with video footage of various visits to Luboml; the manuscript for the book, Luboml: The Memorial Book of a Vanished Shtetl (1997), and various files regarding the exhibition, Remembering Luboml: Images of a Jewish Community.
