Provenance

Naomi Bishop, Corey Denos, Nicholas Hawes; Donation; 2014.

Naomi Bishop; Donation; 2016.

Accruals

No further accruals are expected.

Processing History

Melissa Lindberg processed the collection, beginning in 2015 and completing work in 2016. The collection was organized by family members before it was transferred to the American Folklife Center, and the processor maintained that order. In rare cases where original order was not apparent, the processor assigned an order. Most of the collection was rehoused. Unlabeled folders were assigned labels.

Sara Ludewig processed an accrual to the collection in 2024. She ripped optical media from CDA to WAV file format and matched the analog tapes with their digital surrogates.

Biographical Note

Bess Lomax Hawes (1921-2009) was a folklorist, teacher, musician, writer, filmmaker, and folk arts administrator. Named for her mother, Bess Brown Lomax, Jr. was exposed at a young age to folk music performance and fieldwork through her father, John A. Lomax, and brother, Alan Lomax. As a teenager she transcribed music from field recording sessions, and provided assistance to her father, brother Alan, and composer Ruth Crawford Seeger during their work on Our Singing Country (1941), a collection of American folk songs and ballads. After graduating from Bryn Mawr College in 1941, she moved to New York City, where she performed with the Almanac Singers, including Pete Seeger, Woody Guthrie, her future husband, artist Butch Hawes, and others. She moved with her husband to Cambridge, Massachusetts, where she taught guitar lessons, wrote music and cared for her young children.

In 1952, Hawes moved with her family to California, where she taught guitar and courses in folklore and anthropology at San Fernando Valley State College (now California State University, Northridge). As professor, she wrote a number of academic papers and was an active participant in the California Folklore Society, which she served as president from 1971-1973. While on the faculty at San Fernando Valley State, Hawes completed her M.A. in Folklore from the University of California, Berkeley, studying under folklorist Alan Dundes. She made four films while working in California: Georgia Sea Island Singers (1964), Buckdancer (1965), Pizza Pizza Daddy-O (1967) and Say Old Man, Can You Play the Fiddle (1970).

In 1977, Hawes moved to Washington, D.C. to serve as head of the Folk Arts Program at the National Endowment for the Arts, and stayed on for a fifteen-year tenure. At NEA she raised the public profile of the folk arts, establishing apprenticeship and other grant programs to support folk artists with skills as varied as music and dance, basketmaking, and pottery. A crowning achievement at the NEA was the establishment of the National Heritage Fellowship program to honor folk artists for lifetime achievement and contributions to traditional arts in the United States. Hawes traveled widely for her work at NEA, both nationally and internationally. She wrote several books: Step It Down (1972), co-authored with Bessie Jones; Brown Girl in the Ring (1997), co-authored with Alan Lomax and J.D. Elder; and Sing It Pretty (2008), a memoir. In 1993 Hawes received the National Medal of Arts from president Bill Clinton.

Scope and Content

Collection of manuscripts, sound recordings, graphic materials, moving images and artifacts representing the life work of folk arts administrator, folklorist, filmmaker, musician, and teacher Bess Lomax Hawes. The bulk of the collection materials date from 1960 through 2001 and document Hawes's work as a professor in the anthropology department at San Fernando Valley State College, as a coordinator for the Smithsonian Institution's Festival of American Folklife, and as the first head of the National Endowment for the Arts Folk Arts Program. The collection also includes documentation of Hawes's family life and work as a musician and teacher.

Tapes SR103 to SR107 are tapes from Ralph and Marcy McGlaze, friends and neighbors of Bess and Butch Hawes in Pico Place, Santa Monica, California in the 1950s. The McGlaze family were frequent hosts of parties, hootenannys, benefit concerts, and Bess Hawes' evening guitar classes. These tapes are recordings of Bess Hawes and other performers from the folk revival movement in California in the 1950s. Detailed track listings and photographs of the original tape boxes are available on request.

Formats include correspondence, writings and speeches, musical transcriptions, school records, memos, business records, reports, teaching materials, travel documentation, field and research notes, clippings, awards, sound recordings, moving images, photographs, and artwork.
