Summary: Collection of field recordings, photographs, video recordings, a film, and manuscripts created by Roxane Connick Carlisle primarily in Darfur Province and other locations in the Sudan region, which now includes South Sudan, from 1963-1968. The collection also includes photographs of musicians, musical instruments, markets, gardens, buildings, weddings, and wildlife taken in Sudan, Somalia, Kenya, and Uganda from 1963-1968. Includes field recordings of music of various groups and photographs of musicians including Anuak, Baggara, Beni Halba, Bederiya, Dinka, Fur, Nuer, Ingessana, Shilluk, Ta'isha, Zaghawa, and other people, documenting wedding music, women's song and poetry traditions, and other music and ceremonies. The collection includes eight audio tape reels of oud music, songs, and interviews with noted Sudanese musician Abdel Karim el Kably recorded in 1963. The collection also includes recordings of the radio series, Listen to the World from 1971-1973, broadcast on CHEX-FM, Peterborough, Ontario. The shows were produced, written, and narrated by Roxane Connick Carlisle. Sound recordings for radio programs, demonstration, and teaching ethnomusicology include music from Afghanistan, other locations in Africa (Ethiopia, Burundi, and more), Australia and Papua New Guinea, Brazil, Bulgaria, China, India, Indonesia, Japan, North American Indian, Philippines, Polynesia, Southeast Asia, and Spain, and include recordings for Alan Lomax's Cantometrics project. The collection includes recordings of several speeches and interviews by Roxane Carlisle, including her interview with Ahmed Diraiqe, governor of Darfur, March 1983.

Biographical Note

Roxane Connick Carlisle has served as President of the Institute for Development of Education through the Arts (1987-1990), worked as Special Advisor to the President on the Integration of Women in Development, Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA; 1976-1983), and taught anthropology at Trent University, Peterborough, Ontario, Canada (1970-1972), in addition to other roles in sponsored travel and research (including a Fulbright Fellowship, 1962-1963). She did fieldwork in 1963 and 1967 in various areas of the Sudan, before South Sudan gained its independence, and documented various aspects of cultural traditions for several tribes. She has worked for the Canadian International Development Agency, in part to provide research and guidance towards programs that improve the welfare of women in developing countries. As an ethnomusicologist and educator, she has published works that support the inclusion of world music in universities. Her radio program, Listen to the World was an early introduction to world music for a general audience. Carlisle's career has been, in its many aspects, a means by which traditions on the verge of change are documented, maintained (in memory if not in practice), and shared with various audiences.

Series 3: Photographs

Due to the small space in which to write on the slide mats, some of the information is unclear or difficult to understand. Carlisle's spelling of proper names of locations or ethnic groups reflect contemporary spelling. In these cases, the first instance is revised to reflect current usage, and all instances after that silently revised.
