Biographical Note

Joseph Sargent Hall (1906-1992) was a linguist and folklorist who conducted fieldwork in the Great Smoky Mountain region of Tennessee and North Carolina. In 1937 he was hired by the National Park Service to document the speech and culture of residents being removed from their property for the creation of Great Smoky Mountains National Park. Between 1939 and 1941 he returned to conduct his own research, creating recordings of the region's dialect, singing, and local customs. In 1942, he published a dissertation on the phonetics of Smoky Mountain English for his PhD in Linguistics from Columbia University. In the 1950s he returned to the Great Smoky Mountain region to continue recording residents playing traditional music, discussing folk medicine and witchlore, and telling folk tales.

Scope and Content

Collection of field recordings documenting speech, folktales, local history, customs, beliefs, songs, ballads, hymns, fiddle tunes, and other forms of regional folklife recorded between 1937 and 1941 (discs) and 1956 and 1967 (tapes) by Joseph S. Hall in the Great Smoky Mountains region of Tennessee and North Carolina. Discs were recorded with the assistance of Columbia University and the National Park Service. Also included in the collection are fieldnotes and photographs, drafts of Hall's unpublished manuscripts, correspondence, and other documentation related to his academic career.

Digitized sound recordings (AFC 1987/035: SR001 - SR171) are available as both WAV and MP3 files.

Arrangement

The Joseph S. Hall collection is organized in 3 series:

- Series 1: Fieldwork in the Great Smoky Mountain region, 1937-1969
- Series 2: Unpublished book manuscripts, undated

Appendix A: Photograph ID Concordance

Concordance matching original photograph ID numbers with the AFC assigned PH numbers. The photograph numbering system was inconsistent and often has duplicate IDs. As a result, Sara Ludewig assigned each photograph an AFC PH number. Hall's fieldnotes may contain references to the original photograph ID numbers. This concordance can be used to match the new PH number with the original ID number. Some photographs also were accompanied by item level description of the subjects and contents of the photograph. A hard copy of item level photograph indexes is available in the collection but is also duplicated here for ease of use.
