Acquisition of the Recordings

These sound recordings and textual commentaries were transferred from the Library of Congress Manuscript Division in 1998 for housing and preservation purposes. Other sound recordings were transferred from the Manuscript Division to the American Folklife Center. All of the recordings form part of the MacKinlay Kantor Papers in the Manuscript Division.

Accruals

No further additions to the sound recordings or related commentaries are expected.

Processing History

The sound recordings and textual commentaries were processed by Marsha Maguire in 2009, and by William Corrigan in 2022.

Additional Guides

A finding aid for the MacKinlay Kantor papers in the Manuscript Division is available at findingaids.loc.gov.

Restrictions on Use of the Sound Recordings

Copyright in the unpublished writings of MacKinlay Kantor in these sound recordings and in the other MacKinlay Kantor materials in the custody of the Library of Congress is reserved. For additional information, contact a reference librarian in the Recorded Sound Research Center, National Audio-Visual Conservation Center, Library of Congress, Washington, DC, 20540-4690; (202) 707-7833.

Restrictions on Access to the Sound Recordings

The Dictation Belt Recordings and Commentaries from the MacKinlay Kantor Papers are open to research. The original dictation belts are fragile and are therefore not available for listening. Advance notice is required; contact a reference librarian in the Recorded Sound Research Center, National Audio-Visual Conservation Center, Library of Congress, Washington, DC, 20540-4690; (202) 707-7833.

Preferred Citation

Biography of MacKinlay Kantor

Author, journalist, novelist, and screenwriter.

MacKinlay Kantor was born in Webster City, Iowa, in 1904, and worked as a reporter there from 1921 until 1924. He moved to Chicago in 1925 and tried his hand at freelance writing, after which he combined journalism with literary writing. Kantor's best known works include Andersonville, for which he won the Pulitzer Prize for Fiction in 1956, and other novels of the Civil War. Kantor passed away in 1977.

Scope and Content Note

Series 1 consists of dictation belts (also called dictabelts) recorded on a Dictaphone machine installed in MacKinlay Kantor's automomile, beginning in the 1950's. Most of the belts were nested one inside the other and stored in packets, although there are some individual belts as well. The packets consist of varying numbers of dictation belts; for preservation purposes, not yet disassembled and counted.

As described in the Manuscript Division finding aid for the MacKinlay Kantor Papers, Kantor prepared descriptions of the materials he donated to the Library of Congress in successive installments over a period of fifteen years. Some of these descriptions and commentaries provide background information concerning the creation of his literary works.

Series 2 contains photocopies of descriptions and commentaries written by Kantor about many of the dictation belt recordings listed in Series 1 (the original notes are maintained in the Manuscript Division). Some of Kantor's notes tell stories about the development of the work.

Arrangement

The recordings are arranged in two series:

- Series I. Dictation Belt Recordings
- Series II. MacKinlay Kantor Comments on the Dictation Belt Recordings
