Administrative History

W.K. Henderson and KWKH Radio

The history of KWKH radio begins in 1922, when Shreveport, Louisiana, businessman William Kennon Henderson purchased a share of a small radio station from one of his employees, W.C. Patterson. The station initially was assigned the call numbers WGAQ and operated out of a studio in the Youree Hotel in Shreveport. In 1925 Henderson purchased a majority stake in WGAQ and relocated the station to his summer home, called Kennonwood, outside of Shreveport. Henderson also changed the call numbers to KWKH.

With KWKH up and running in Kennonwood, Henderson was eager to broadcast to a larger listening audience and began lobbying federal authorities for a more favorable wavelength and increased wattage. After these requests were denied in 1925, Henderson took matters into his own hands and increased KWKH's wattage without legal permission. This led to an investigation by Department of Commerce inspectors amid complaints from radio listeners across the country that KWKH was blocking reception of other programming.

During this time, Henderson began to use KWKH as a personal soapbox and gained a reputation for intensity and abrasiveness as he lambasted critics and accused the federal government of discriminating against the South. Behind the scenes, Henderson and his old partner, W.C. Patterson, sent out flurries of correspondence to U.S. senators, judges, the supervisor of radio in New Orleans, and even President Calvin Coolidge, continually requesting fair representation on the airwaves. Their crusade came to a crescendo in 1927 when, amid press coverage and a massive letter campaign, Henderson travelled to Washington to testify before the Federal Radio Commission. By the end of the decade, Henderson had secured his request to increase KWKH's power to 10,000 watts and successfully waged a legal campaign against an Oklahoma radio station, KVOO, that coveted KWKH's wavelength.

When Henderson wasn't waging legal battles, he was playing phonograph recordings and recruiting local talent to perform for his listeners. Eager to put a regional stamp on his broadcasts and support local music trends, he frequently played the "hillbilly" music that was popular in the area at the time. Henderson sold KWKH in 1932, but the seeds had been sown for the station to continue its support for the regional music that would so greatly influence the country and rockabilly genres.

The Louisiana Hayride

The Louisiana Hayride on KWKH radio began its primary run on April 3, 1948. Proclaiming itself the "Cradle of the Stars," the weekly radio program was broadcast live from the Shreveport Municipal Auditorium. The Hayride was one of several country and western style radio broadcasts that were popular at the time. What distinguished the Hayride was its willingness to branch into rockabilly and even early rock while providing a proving ground for young, aspiring, and often unknown artists. Indeed, the Hayride's raucous crowds and upstart musicians stood in stark contrast to the program's counterpart in Nashville, the Grand Ole Opry, which tapped into a more traditional and established line of country music performances.

Regular Hayride performers included country music legends, such as Hank Williams, Johnny Cash, Johnny Horton, Faron Young, George Jones, Merle Kilgore, Webb Pierce, the Maddox Brothers & Rose, David Houston, and the Wilburn Brothers, among others. In 1954 a teenaged Elvis Presley signed on as a regular Hayride cast member. Presley would perform at the Hayride weekly from 1954 until April 1956. By that time, his popularity had exploded far beyond the Hayride audience and he was permitted to buy out the remainder of his contract. However, KWKH and the Hayride, which by then broadcast at 50,000 watts to audiences throughout the country and beyond, played a critical role in launching the early career of the King of Rock and Roll.

Hosted through the years by Horace Logan, Frank Page, and Norm Bale, the Louisiana Hayride was broadcast weekly until 1960. Unfortunately, the once proud "Cradle of the Stars" had eroded as musicians fled to Nashville for more lucrative opportunities and the popularity of rock and roll increased. Programming continued sporadically throughout the sixties until 1974, when the Hayride was reborn for a thirteen-year run as a syndicated radio program under Shreveport businessman David Kent.

Scope and Content Note

The collection predominantly covers early radio and television history in Shreveport, Louisiana; KWKH radio in the W.K. Henderson era; and the Louisiana Hayride years at KWKH radio. The Early Shreveport Radio and Television series provides special emphasis on the careers of Paul Carriger and William E. Antony (the latter was head engineer in the early days of WGAQ/KWKH). This is documented in ephemera, radio licenses, and published articles.

The KWKH Radio and W.K. Henderson series provides significant insight into early KWKH radio history and Henderson's personality and legal battles, as well as his financial struggles during the Great Depression. Several 78 rpm discs also document Henderson's original radio broadcasts. Ephemera relating to the Henderson Iron Works and early KWKH radio is of particular interest.

The KWKH Radio and the Louisiana Hayride series contains original program notes, posters, postcards, and ephemera related to Hayride performances. A group of tape reels in this series documents a sampling of live Louisiana Hayride performances from 1956-1961. Several LP and 78 rpm commercial recordings feature Louisiana Hayride performances from the primary and secondary runs. There are also over thirty transcription discs from the Hayrides's years as a syndicated radio program. There are also photographic prints (including some contact prints and sheets) and negatives showing performers during the program's initial and secondary runs. A number of the photographs were taken by longtime Shreveport Times photographer Langston McEachern.

A separate series related to Elvis Presley's time at the Hayride is notable for its photographs of Presley at the Shreveport Municipal Auditorium, both in performance on stage and interacting with staff and fans backstage.

Three additional series feature collection documentation prepared by the donor; a list of periodicals relating to radio enthusiasts, country music, and Shreveport life; and a group of songbooks and sheet music.

Series

Series 1. Early Shreveport Radio and Television, 1922-1964 , undated

Series 1 includes correspondence, licenses, listener verification requests, and ephemera from various early Shreveport, Louisiana, radio and television stations (KTSL, KGDX, WDAN, KWEA, and W5XA). Also included are handwritten research timelines and notations as well as photocopies of various publications relevant to the period. The material especially emphasizes the work of Paul Carriger and William E. Antony, early radio and television broadcasters in Shreveport.

Materials in this series are predominantly reproductions.

Materials were arranged chronologically within content groupings when dates were available.

BOX-FOLDER 1/1

Correspondence, 1922-1933

BOX-FOLDER 1/2

Charters and licenses, 1922-1933

BOX-FOLDER 1/3

Shortwave radio listener (DXer's) verification requests, 1931-1932 , undated

BOX-FOLDER 1/4

Ephemera, circa 1927-1933 , undated

Includes an original 1931 W5XA postcard showing Giddens Castle, a Shreveport, Louisiana, landmark, built by Tandy Key Giddens, that housed early Shreveport radio and television stations. Also included are reproductions documenting program information, broadcast and frequency information, first-hand accounts of Paul Carriger's and William E. Antony's early radio and television broadcasting experiences, and a description of Giddens Castle.

BOX-FOLDER 1/5

Articles and publications, 1922-1964 , bulk 1922 , undated

Includes numerous newspaper article photocopies from 1922 and several pages from the December 1931 issue of Waves from the Castle of Dreams. A 1964 article and two undated articles document the lives and experiences of William E. Antony and Paul Carriger.

BOX-FOLDER 1/6

Research timelines and notations, undated

Includes handwritten timelines and notations documenting call letters, frequencies, wattage allotments, sale and purchase information, and radio equipment for early radio stations in the Shreveport, Louisiana, area.

Series 2. KWKH Radio and W.K. Henderson, 1904-1998 , bulk 1922-1939 , undated

Series 2 includes licenses, broadcast transcripts, newspaper and magazine articles, and ephemera relating to KWKH radio from the time of its founding by W.C. Patterson to its subsequent ownership by W.K. Henderson. Correspondence, articles and publications, and newspaper photocopies provide a vivid account of the legal disputes that highlighted Henderson's career as KWKH owner and broadcaster. These relate especially to the crusade to increase the station's wattage and wavelength frequency. Anti-chain store publications reflect Henderson's strong support of locally owned businesses in Shreveport, Louisiana. Materials in the correspondence files; congressional and Federal Radio Commission records; legal documentation; and files containing licenses, transcripts, chain store booklets, and newspaper articles are predominantly reproductions.

Materials were arranged chronologically within content groupings when dates were available.
