Administrative History

Charles P. MacGregor (1897-1968) was an American radio producer and distributor. Alongside Sigurd A. Sollie, Charles founded the C.P. MacGregor Company, a sound recording studio, in 1929 in San Francisco, CA. The C.P. MacGregor Co. moved its studio to Los Angeles, CA in 1936 and began producing music and dramatic radio programs like Heartbeat Theatre.

Heartbeat Theatre aired in 1956 as a weekly, dramatic radio program and was sponsored by the Salvation Army. Episodes of Heartbeat Theatre highlighted the Salvation Army's operations and work within communities, and its stories were inspirational with themes of morality. In 1978, the Salvation Army updated the show with more current, societal issues and renamed it the New Heartbeat Theatre. The show officially ended in 1985.

Scope and Content Note

The collection primarily contains scripts, along with some music scoring sheets, from the half-hour, radio drama Heartbeat Theatre. The first, fifty scripts from the Heartbeat Theatre program are not included in the collection, and there are a few gaps in the original series. The New Heartbeat Theatre portion of the collection is complete. At the end of the container list, there are 81 unnumbered Heartbeat Theatre scripts.

Arrangement

The Heartbeat Theatre Radio Scripts Collection is organized in 1 series:
