Acquisition Information

The papers of Hedrick Smith, journalist, author, and documentarian, were given by Smith to the Library of Congress in several installments from 1986 to 2019. Some of these installments were received as gifts while others were received as deposits, which were later converted to gifts. Material relating to Smith's television program, "The Power Game," was given to the Library by the program's producer, Philip Burton, in 1990.

Processing History

A preliminary list of the Hedrick Smith Papers was compiled for the early material received in 1986 and was revised in 1992 by David Mathisen and Lisa Madison. Part I of the collection consisting of accessions from 1986 through 1993 was arranged and described in 1999 by Connie L. Cartledge with the assistance of Sherralyn McCoy. Part II of the collection consisting of accessions from 2001 through 2010 was arranged and described in 2020 by Michael Folkerts with the assistance of Jake Bozza, Rosa Hernandez, Colleen Kim, Amanda Loeb, Kate Madison, Kathleen O'Neill, Laney Stevenson, and Tammi Taylor.

Digital files were received in Part II of the Hedrick Smith Papers on a variety of storage media, each of which was assigned a unique Digital ID number. Use the Digital ID number to request access copies of the files associated with each media. A description of the standard processes taken on all born digital records can be found in the Processing History Note: Born Digital Collection Material at <https://hdl.loc.gov/loc.mss/eadmss.digital>. Empty files, temporary files, and extraneous program files were removed during the course of processing.

Some items in the Hedrick Smith papers have undergone mold remediation.

Additional Description

A description of the Smith Papers appears in Library of Congress Acquisitions: Manuscript Division, 1986, pp. 19-21.

Scope and Content Note

The papers of Hedrick Laurence Smith span the years 1923-2010, with the bulk of the material concentrated in the period 1965-2010. The papers document Smith's career as a journalist, author, and documentarian, and his coverage on a wide variety of topics including United States-Soviet relations, politics, the economy, and the American working class. The collections is divided into two parts. The majority of Part I spans from 1965 to 1990 and focuses on Smith's career as journalist and author, and consists of research material for Smith's books and television productions about the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics (USSR) and United States politics. Part I consists of six series: Part I: Correspondence, Part I: Speeches and Writings File, Part I: Television Productions, Part I: Subject File, Part I: Notebooks, and Part I: Miscellany, plus oversize and security classified material. The bulk of Part II of the Hedrick Smith papers spans from 1988 to 2010, and focuses on Smith's later career as a documentarian and the numerous television productions he wrote, hosted and produced.

Part II consists of four series: Part II: Correspondence, Part II: Television Productions, Part II: Speeches and Writings, and Part II: Subject File.

Part I: Correspondence, 1959-1990, contains a wide variety of professional and personal correspondence, including attachments and enclosures, between Smith and friends, colleagues, acquaintances, and the public.

Part I: Speeches and Writings File, 1923-1992, reflects Smith's productivity in various formats, and includes correspondence, speeches, articles, books, forewords and introductions, radio broadcasts, interviews, research material, notes, outlines, bibliographies, and printed matter.

Part I: Television Productions, 1956-1990, contains correspondence, memoranda, interviews, scripts, outlines, notes, logbooks, research material, lists, calendars and scheduling material, and printed matter documenting Smith's roles as commentator, host, and writer for documentary productions.

Part I: Subject File, 1957-1990, contains correspondence, memoranda, interviews, articles, legal material, background material, notes, press releases and briefing material, invitations, and printed matter primarily from Smith's work as a reporter for the New York Times.

Part I: Notebooks, 1966-1990, primarily document Smith's activities as a reporter for the New York Times.

Part I: Miscellany, 1957-1988, consists chiefly of correspondence, interviews, biographical material, financial records, and family papers. The bulk of the series consists of papers relating to Smith's Pulitzer Prize for international reporting and his New York Times expense statements recording details of Smith's daily professional activities and contacts with government agencies. The family papers include a compilation of Smith's letters from 1971 to 1972, which were read by his mother at her book club, describing some of his experiences while in Moscow.

Part II: Correspondence, 1959-2010, contains a variety of professional and personal correspondence between Smith and friends, colleagues, acquaintances, and the public.

Part II: Speeches and Writings File, 1960-2010, consists of Smith's speaking engagements and authorship of several books, and includes correspondence, notes, speeches, drafts, research, reviews, schedules, contracts, and memoranda.

Part II: Television Productions, 1986-2009, contains production bibles, interview transcripts, segment planning documents, research, notes, correspondence, and other various material documenting Smith's roles as producer, host, and writer for documentary productions.

Part II: Subject File, 1952-2009, contains material chiefly related to Hedrick Smith Productions and includes correspondence, research, production proposals, photographs, memorabilia, and printed matter.

BOX 1-7

Series
Part I: Correspondence, 1959-1990

Much of the material consists of social exchanges such as congratulations on awards and accomplishments, particularly for his books, The Russians and The Power Game, and his Pulitzer Prize award in 1974 for international reporting. Other items relate to speaking engagements, articles, and book publishing efforts apart from his New York Times duties or to descriptions of his assignments, especially letters to his parents while Smith was stationed in Moscow from 1971 to 1974 as bureau chief for the Times. Among the prominent and frequent correspondents in this series are Julian Bach, William F. Buckley, Emanuel R. Freedman, W. Averell Harriman, Lillian Hellman, Anthony Lewis, Robert Manning, James Reston, Neil Sheehan, Arthur Ochs Sulzberger, and Tom Wicker. There is additional correspondence and material relating to Smith's Pulitzer Prize of 1974 in the Miscellany series.

Arranged chronologically.

BOX 7-97

Part I: Speeches and Writings File, 1923-1992

Comprising almost one half of Part I, the Speeches and Writings File, 1923-1992, reflects Smith's productivity in various formats, including speeches, articles, books, and radio broadcasts. The majority of the articles consists of drafts of Smith's New York Times articles from 1976 to 1984. Smith also filed drafts and printed articles in his research files for The Russians and in the Subject File. The early articles document Smith's tenure as a staff reporter covering the civil rights movement in the South and space exploration for United Press International from 1959 to 1962.

Papers relating to Smith's best-selling books The Russians, The New Russians, and The Power Game include research material, notebooks, and notes. The Russians focused on the daily lives of the Russian people under the Communist system, while The New Russians explored the change for Soviet citizens with the introduction of glasnost (openness) and perestroika (restructuring). Among the prominent subjects in files related to The Russians are Russian culture, dissent, nationalities and minorities, religion, the economy, United States/Soviet relations, and the exodus of Jews. Subject files on dissent also include extensive material relating to dissidents Aleksandr Galich, Roy Aleksandrovich Medvedev, Zhores A. Medvedev, Andrei Sakharov, Aleksandr Isaevich Solzhenitsyn, and Vladimir Vysotsky. The Solzhenitsyn files include items relating to a meeting with Smith and Washington Post reporter Robert Kaiser in 1972 and a second interview with Solzhenitsyn two years after his expulsion from the Soviet Union. These files also contain material pertaining to the publication of a revised edition of The Russians in 1983.

The New Russians chronicles the reforms in the Soviet Union under Mikhail Gorbachev and how the Soviet people coped with these changes. Subjects represented are nationalities, politics, consumer and economic issues, Mikhail Sergeevich Gorbachev, and glasnost in the media and in intellectual expressions. There is overlap between the research files for this book and files for Smith's television production, "Inside Gorbachev's USSR," since many of the same topics are featured in both series.

In The Power Game Smith turned his attention to national politics in the United States, focusing on Congress and the executive branch primarily during the presidency of Ronald Reagan. The bulk of this material consists of interview transcripts, notebooks, and notes. Topics featured are lobbying, arms control, defense policies, and the power of Congressional staff. Individuals interviewed for The Power Game include Les Aspin, Howard H. Baker, James Addison Baker, Richard Gordon Darman, Michael K. Deaver, Robert J. Dole, Newt Gingrich, Robert C. McFarlane, Tip O'Neill, John M. Poindexter, and Donald T. Regan. Files for a potential book entitled "Three Presidents: Three Decisions" focus on three critical foreign policy events, the Cuban missile crisis in 1962 during John F.

Kennedy's administration, the deescalation of the war in Vietnam before Lyndon Johnson's announcement not to seek reelection in 1968, and the decision by Richard M. Nixon to invade Cambodia in 1970. Also filed with the "Three Presidents" material are items for a projected publication with fellow Times reporter William Beecher on America's "Vietnam turnaround."

Arranged alphabetically by type of material and therein by title or topic.

BOX 97-138

Part I: Television Productions, 1956-1990

The Part I: Television Productions series, 1956-1990, includes interviews, research files, notes, notebooks, and scripts documenting Smith's roles as commentator and writer primarily for the productions "Inside Gorbachev's USSR" and "The Power Game." The Gorbachev program provided American viewers with a close look at the Soviet people and dealt with the conflict between reform and the old political system, the efforts toward glasnost in the media, and the escalation of ethnic tensions in some of the Soviet republics. "The Power Game," adapted from Smith's book of the same title, provided an analysis of behind-the-scenes efforts by politicians to gain power and keep it and how they at times used or misused their power. Interview notebooks for "The Power Game" also include transcripts of Smith's introductory comments or "standups" as well as government hearings and speeches.

Arranged alphabetically by name of production and therein by topic or type of material.

BOX 138-161

Part I: Subject File, 1957-1990

Both this series and Part I: Notebooks primarily document Smith's years as a correspondent and bureau chief stationed in Washington, D.C. Topics include the reorganization of Carter's cabinet, peace in the Middle East, Strategic Arms Limitation Talks, the presidential campaigns of 1980 and 1984, Central America, and United States/Soviet relations. This series also contains extensive material concerning the Vietnam conflict during the Nixon administration and Smith's coverage of the Vietnam peace talks in Paris from May through November 1968. Also included are items relating to the Pentagon Papers wiretapping suit in which Smith sued Nixon and officials in his administration for tapping Smith's telephone for several months in 1969.

Arranged alphabetically by name of person or organization, topic, or type of material.

BOX 161-183

Part I: Notebooks, 1966-1990

Similar to Part I: Subject File, this series documents Smith's years as a correspondent and bureau chief stationed in Washington, D.C. The notebooks include interviews and conversations with leading officials in Washington and abroad and cover many of the same topics listed in Part I: Subject File.

Arranged chronologically.

BOX 183-184

Part I: Miscellany, 1957-1988

Correspondence, interviews, family papers, financial records, certificates, biographical information, calendars, and a yearbook.

Arranged alphabetically by topic or type of material and therein chronologically.

BOX CL 1

Part I: Classified, 1968-1982

Cables, affidavits, notes, and biographical material.

Organized and described according to the series, containers, and folders from which the items were removed.

BOX OV 1-OV 2

Part I: Oversize, 1966-1974

Oversize material consisting of posters, maps, and a scrapbook.

Organized and described according to the series, folders, and containers from which the items were removed.

BOX 185-187

Part II: Correspondence, 1959-2010

Complementing the same series in Part I, Part II: Correspondence similarly features social exchanges regarding accomplishments, books, and television productions. Additional correspondence with the New York Times and Hedrick's father, Sterling Smith, can be found in the Part II: Subject File series.

Arranged chronologically.

BOX 187-223

Part II: Speeches and Writings File, 1960-2010

The Speeches and Writings File contains documentation regarding Smith's public appearances and written publications, with the bulk of the material concerning his book Rethinking America (1995). The series includes correspondence, notes, and printed matter on topics Smith was researching for speeches, interviews, books, and articles. The bulk of the writings material consists of drafts, research, and administrative material related to Rethinking America, Smith's 1995 book that was based on his "Challenge to America" documentary. Also present is administrative material and correspondence related to his books The Russians (1975), Reagan, the Man, the President (1980), The Power Game (1987), and The New Russians (1990), along with one folder of research material related to Who Stole the American Dream (2012). Articles he produced, many based on the topics of his books, are included under the publication name. A digital file contains various documents related to Smith's various engagements. Material types include correspondence, notes, drafts, research, reviews, schedules, contracts, digital files, and memoranda.

Arranged alphabetically by type of material. The file structure of the digital content maintained as received.

BOX 224-550

Part II: Television Productions, 1986-2009

Part II: Television Productions makes up the overwhelming majority of Part II of the collection, chronicling the many documentaries Smith created for the Public Broadcasting Service (PBS) and Frontline. These documentaries cover a variety of topics generally viewed through the lens of the American working class. Highlights include programs such as "Challenge to America," which explores how the American economy, and especially automobile manufacturing, contrasts to the German and Japanese economies with regard to treatment of employees, and "Surviving the Bottom Line," which continues such themes and explores the decision-making of chief executive officers and their effects on employees and the shift in education to better prepare workers for the American economy. "Making Schools Work" continues the theme of school reform, while "Juggling Work and Family" looks at the pressures of working class families balancing their jobs and family and the unions and corporations that are accommodating them. "Critical Condition" covers the healthcare industry and insurance companies' conflict of profit-seeking versus providing care, especially regarding the chronically ill.

Smith's other documentaries expand his focus beyond the working class while still exploring diverse American communities. "Across the River," looks at community-building efforts in low-income neighborhoods in Washington D.C. "Seeking Solutions" examines community grassroots programs, including local responses to hate crimes in South Carolina. "Duke Ellington's Washington," a biography of jazz composer Duke Ellington, also documents the African American community of Washington D.C. "The People and the Power Game" investigates American politics and the influence of lobbyists and the media, as well as the Republican-led U.S. House of Representatives and House Speaker Newt Gingrich and Bill Clinton's presidential administration. Additional topics covered in his documentaries include retirement, campaign finance reform, Enron Corp., Wal-Mart, water pollution, Dave Brubeck, tax evasion, and investment banking.

This series contains a range of material used in the production of Smith's television documentaries, including production bibles, interview transcripts, research files, segment planning documents, notes, correspondence, digital files, and printed matter. All recordings related to these productions were transferred to the Motion Picture, Broadcasting, and Record Sound Division.

Arranged into 24 subseries, alphabetically by production.

BOX 224-239

"Across the River," 1990-1996

"Across the River" explores community-building efforts in low-income neighborhoods with high crime rates situated across the Anacostia River in Washington, D.C. Organizations profiled in this documentary include the Alliance of Concerned Men, the Anacostia-Congress Heights Partnership, the Marshall Heights Community Development Organization, the Parklands community, and mentorship programs at Draper Elementary School and Anacostia High School's Public Service Academy. Research files documenting the missions and activities of the various organizations profiled in the film form a large part of this subseries. Interview transcripts and segment planning materials, which includes files related to a town-hall style community forum hosted by Smith, further illustrate the people involved in these grassroots efforts to revive Washington, D.C. neighborhoods. The Alliance of Concerned Men is also profiled in Smith's documentary, "Seeking Solutions."

"Bigger Than Enron," 1998-2002

This subseries contains segment planning material, interview transcripts, digital files, and research files related to Smith's Public Broadcasting Service Frontline episode, "Bigger than Enron," which delves into the collapse of the Enron Corporation and Arthur Anderson LLP and traces the oversight failures that allowed corporate executives to commit financial fraud. This documentary more broadly explores the world of corporate accounting and the many financial accounting schemes companies like Sunbeam Products and Waste Management used to promote short-term growth against its long-term interests. Material pertaining to the many interviews Smith conducted for this production form the bulk of the subseries and includes transcripts, notes, and transcript pulls. Files related to the publicity plans and viewer response to the episode are also included.

Arranged alphabetically by topic or material type.

"Campaign Finances: Abuses and Reforms," 1996-1997

This production contains three segments produced for Public Broadcasting Service's NewsHour with Jim Lehrer, and served as a companion piece for "The People and the Power Game." The first segment, "The Niagara of Money," explores the breakdown of the Campaign Finance Reform Act of 1974 and how the Federal Election Commission has allowed the election system to be overwhelmed by the volume of money. The segment "Big Sugar-Sweet Deal" looks at campaign contributions and their ability to influence legislation, with a specific example of the sugar industry's lobbying for import restrictions. The final segment, "Reform - As Maine Goes...?" focuses on the efforts of campaign finance reform, and specifically the push for public financing of elections in Maine and the McCain-Feingold proposal (later the Bipartisan Campaign Reform Act). Materials include research, interview transcripts, and segment planning documents.

"Challenge to America," 1991-1998

In "Challenge to America," the first major documentary from Hedrick Smith Productions, Smith contrasts the American economy with Germany and Japan, highlighting the differences to urge reform among large United States corporations in the face of an increasingly global market. The four-part series sees Smith interviewing the leaders of major companies such as Mitsubishi Jūkōgyō Kabushiki Kaisha, Toyota Jidōsha Kabushiki Kaisha, Daimler-Benz Aktiengesellschaft, Airbus Industrie, Ford Motor Company, Boeing Company, General Motors Corporation, International Business Machines Corporation, and Motorola among others. Program one, "Old Ways New Game," looks at how global competition has changed companies and the strategies companies in the automobile and information technology industries adopted. Program two, "The Heart of the Nation," compares the educational systems in the United States, Germany, and Japan and how those systems prepare students entering the work force. Program three, "The Culture of Commerce," looks at the roles of Chief Executive Officers (CEOs) and their role in shaping the companies, and the limits to their power in other countries as they balance share-holder and labor interests. Program four, "Winning Strategies," details five American success stories that echo the lessons from Germany and Japan. In addition to the four programs, Smith interviewed President Bill Clinton about his administration's response to the problems raised by the series. Preliminary work and research on a follow-up to "Challenge to America," which eventually became "Surviving the Bottom Line," is also featured in this series. Materials include interview transcripts, production bibles, segment planning material, research, financial material, and other production materials.

"Critical Condition," 1997-2001

"Critical Condition" is a four-part series that investigates the American healthcare system. The first segment, "The Quality Gap," looks at how medical errors kills thousands of Americans every year. Specific story topics include a Veterans Affairs hospital and how heart surgeries are reported in New York and Northern New England hospitals. "The Chronically Ill" explores how managed care is covered by insurance companies Humana and Kaiser Permanente. As the financial objectives of insurance companies conflict with treating chronically ill patients, coverage is often denied. "The Idealistic HMO" looks at Kaiser Permanente as a not-for-profit HMO (health maintenance organization) and their AIDS and diabetes programs, whose patients require costly continual treatment. "The Uninsured" segment focuses on the working poor, those with employers who do not provide health insurance cannot afford to pay for medical coverage on their own. Smith looks at Tenn-Care in Tennessee and the Child Health Insurance Program, both programs created to cover the uninsured, and how they both help and fall short in their efforts. This production was created in conjunction with "Dr. Solomon's Dilemma," and may contain related information. Materials include production bibles, interview transcripts, research, digital files, segment planning documents, and interview transcript pulls.

"Dr. Solomon's Dilemma," 1998-2001

In Dr. Solomon's Dilemma, a Frontline production produced in conjunction with "Critical Condition," Smith travels to Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center in Boston, Massachusetts to delve into the dilemmas facing doctors in weighing treatment versus cost when offering care to patients. Smith explores how high quality treatment may cost the hospital profits, and how patients are affected when health care decisions are not necessarily made in their best interests. Materials include interview transcripts, production bibles, publicity material, and research.

"Duke Ellington's Washington," 1998-2000

"Duke Ellington's Washington" chronicles the early life of American composer and jazz artist, Duke Ellington, and how the African American community in Washington, D.C. nurtured his talent. The documentary further explores the celebrated past of Washington, D.C.'s Black community and the modern revival of that heritage. Files concerning stock footage, still image, and musical rights form a large portion of the subseries, as do files containing information about the film's funding and support and publicity plans and events. Photographs depict the production crew and documentary subjects in and around the U Street corridor in Washington, D.C., and also include interior and exterior images of the Howard Theatre in 2000, prior to its renovation.

"Is Wal-Mart Good for America?," 2004

The retail chain Wal-Mart and the role the store plays in the American economy is explored in "Is Wal-Mart Good for America?." The documentary details the rise of Wal-Mart and how its ethos of cheap prices and high-volume sales lead to it becoming the largest retailer in the world. The film details how Wal-Mart's size allows it to dictate manufacturing in the United States and China. The demands Wal-Mart places on American companies in lowering prices often leads to those companies looking overseas to China to exploit cheaper labor for lower production costs. Materials include interview transcripts, production bibles, research, correspondence, and notes.

"Juggling Work and Family," 1996-2002

"Juggling Work and Family" examines the impact of working people's struggle to reconcile workplace expectations with family needs and chronicles progressive efforts by corporations and labor unions to alleviate the pressure for working couples and single parents. Material concerning subject scouting trips and shoot logistics in several different states form a large part of this subseries and documents the many locations, workplace initiatives, and companies the production company explored as potential subjects for this film. Employers and unions featured in this documentary and well-represented in the records include Hewlett-Packard Company, Baxter International, Marriott International, New York City's Local 1199 Service Employees International Union, and several Boston, Massachusetts based law firms, Goodwin Procter, chief among them. Notes and scouting reports for Johnson and Johnson are also included in this subseries. Several files reflect publicity efforts Smith used for this film and include information on screening events and a partnership with the public relations firm, Goodman Media International. The evolution of this film's concept and the various segments' focus is particularly well documented in a file containing feedback from the film's first rough-cut and files containing segment write-ups.

"Making Schools Work," 1999-2006

"Making Schools Work" explores how several school districts and school reform models across the United States made a difference in providing effective education programs for students. Material concerning location scouting trips and shoot logistics in seven different cities form a large part of this subseries and documents the many locations, education models, and school districts the production company explored as potential subjects for this film. Education models and districts featured in the documentary and reflected in the records include the Knowledge is Power Program (KIPP) at the KIPP 3D Academy in Houston, Texas; the Comer Process at the Jordan School in Chicago, Illinois; the Success For All program, implemented by Centennial Elementary School in Mount Vernon, Washington; High Schools that Work schools in Corbin, Kentucky; District 2 in New York City, New York; the Charlotte-Mecklenburg School District in Charlotte, North Carolina; and the San Diego School District in San Diego, California. Files concerning financial support illustrate the evolution of the film and trace the origin of this project back to 2002, shortly after President George W. Bush passed the No Child Left Behind Act.

"The People and the Power Game," 1995-1996

"The People and the Power Game" was a documentary series made in conjunction with PBS's Democracy Now project in the leadup to the 1996 presidential election. The documentary is divided into two segments, "The Unelected: The Lobbies and Media" and "The Elected: The Presidency and Congress." The media portion of "The Unelected" segment focuses on print and network news and their coverage of politics in the 1990s with a focus on tabloid-style news and ratings, such as the Bill Clinton and Gennifer Flowers story. News anchors Peter Jennings and Dan Rather are profiled in this segment. The lobbyist portion of the "The Unelected" details the relationships business and special interest groups have with the Republican-led Congress. The tobacco industry, United Parcel Service (UPS), and the health-care industry are profiled. Moving to the politicians themselves in "The Elected" segment of the series, Smith first takes a look at the American presidency and how much power the institution holds. Smith interviews Al Gore, Leon Panetta, and George Stephanopoulos, to understand the difficulties the Clinton administration had in passing its agenda despite controlling both houses of Congress. Moving from the presidency, Smith finally looks at the Republican-led Congress elected in 1994, and profiles Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich. Other congressmen interviewed include Robert Dole, Richard Gephardt, and Tom Daschle. This series also produced two companion pieces for The NewsHour with Jim Lehrer: "The Republican Freshman" and "Campaign Finance: Abuses and Reform." Material in this series includes production bibles, digital files, interview transcripts, research, and segment planning documents.

"Poisoned Waters," 2005-2009

In "Poisoned Waters," Smith explores how, more than two decades after the passage of the Clean Water Act, the water quality in the Puget Sound and the Chesapeake Bay remains poor, with both estuaries and the species living in and around them greatly affected by polluted runoff from industry, agriculture, and suburban development. Research files specific to the environment surrounding the Puget Sound and Chesapeake Bay make up the bulk of this series and include interview preparation notes and interview summaries. Interviews with the many subjects appearing in this documentary are further chronicled by the many transcript pulls, which are arranged by both topic and interview subject name. Segment planning files and shoot books also comprise a large portion of this subseries and trace shoot logistics as well as the development and evolution of reporting angles and story concepts. Many of the support files detailing financial contributions and fundraising were treated for mold.

Arranged alphabetically by topic or material type.

BOX 441-443

"The Power Game," 1986-1991

"The Power Game," adapted from Smith's book of the same title, provided an analysis of behind-the-scenes efforts by politicians to gain power and keep it and how they at times used or misused their power. Files in this subseries are small in scope and complement those in Part I. Letters from viewers include reactions to both the documentary series and book.

Arranged alphabetically by topic or material type.

"The Republican Freshman: An Update to The People and the Power Game," 1995-1996

This production contains two segments produced for The NewsHour with Jim Lehrer, and served as a companion piece for "The People and the Power Game." The first segment, "The House: Which Way?" looks at the upcoming 1996 election through the re-election campaigns of three Republican congressmen. The second segment, "The Greening of the Class of '94," aired after the 1996 election and looked at the freshman Republican elected in 1994 and their evolution after two years in office. Materials include research, interview transcripts, and segment planning documents.

BOX 455-479

"Seeking Solutions," 1996-2001

"Seeking Solutions" highlights communities across the country that successfully implemented grassroots solutions to address local crime and build stronger community networks. Production bibles, digital files, segment and shoot planning materials, and interview transcripts document the communities profiled in the film and include responses to hate crimes in South Carolina and San Clemente, California and adult mentorship programs aimed at preventing teen violence fostered by the Alliance of Concerned Men in Washington, D.C. and Los Hermanos Youth Crime Prevention Program at the Oregon State Penitentiary. Examples of effective community building in the Uptown neighborhood of Chicago, Illinois and Blue Hills neighborhood of Kansas City, Missouri also feature in the documentary film and in the records. Material documenting the various sources of financial support for the film reflect the evolution of this project, from its initial proposal and film outline titled "Coming Together," to its final form. Some of the content used in this documentary, namely footage of Washington, D.C.'s Alliance of Concerned Men, is also used in the Hedrick Smith Productions' film, "Across the River."

"Surviving the Bottom Line," 1994-2000

Originally starting out as a planned sequel to "Challenge to America," "Surviving the Bottom Line" evolved into a four-part series looking at the United States economy and how many Americans struggle to survive. The series begins with "Running With the Bulls," a look at corporate America and how chief executive officers (CEOs) grapple with investors from Wall Street to balance running companies while promoting stock growth. Through interviews with former executives, Hedrick Smith covers the merger of Chase and Chemical Banks, the rapid expansion of ValuJet, and the cost cutting of CEO Albert J. Dunlap at Sunbeam Products. In "Living on the Fault Line," Smith travels to San Diego to explore the transition the city made from manufacturing to high-tech industry. One example is Qualcomm, which compensates its engineers and programmers well, but relies on temporary employment for its manufacturing division. Personal stories of these temporary employees are told, and illustrate the hardships of needing to work over sixty to eighty hours per week to keep benefits at the expense of seeing their families. "Learning to Survive" explores the ways public education is adapting to the challenges of a changing economy and how schools are preparing students for the workforce. Smith travels to two schools in Shanghai, China; the Alliance Schools Initiative in the Rio Grande Valley of Texas; the Academy of Health and Bioscience in Oakland, California; and the Cincinnati State Technical and Community College; to detail the different programs these schools are offering to prepare students for a global economy. Finally, in "Beating the Bottom Line," Smith looks at how various company executives have changed their approaches in managing profits by sharing with employees to lessen the wealth gap. Companies visited include the Hathaway Shirt Company and their partnership with Waterville, Maine to help keep the company afloat despite cheaper imported textiles; and Harman International's refusal to lower costs by moving its production to Mexico. Labor unions and their roles in protecting jobs in a Newport News, Virginia shipyard and Northwest Airlines is also covered. Finally, Smith travels to the Netherlands to interview the president of Holland's Social Economic Council, and learns of the various worker protections the Dutch government provides for its citizens. Some footage from this documentary was used for the The NewsHour with Jim Lehrer production of "High Skills Tech Gap." Material in this subseries includes production bibles, digital files, interview transcripts, and segment planning documents. Arranged alphabetically by topic or material type.

"Tax Me if You Can," 2002-2004

This subseries contains segment planning materials, research files, publicity and promotional material, and production bibles related to Smith's Public Broadcasting Service Frontline episode, "Tax Me if You Can," which investigates the use of tax shelters by American corporations and how fraudulent transactions are developed and used to avoid tax collection by the Internal Revenue Service. Shoot books form the largest part of this subseries and reflect the many locations Smith filmed for this episode including the Cayman Islands, Germany, Florida, New York, and Massachusetts, among others. Editing pulls and interview transcript pulls are also well represented, as are files pertaining to the various publicity strategies Smith employed to promote this episode. Arranged alphabetically by topic or material type.

BOX 539-550

"Wall Street Fix," 2000-2003

This subseries contains segment planning material, research files, interview transcripts, and financial support files related to Smith's Public Broadcasting Service Frontline episode, "Wall Street Fix," which traces the rise and fall of WorldCom and explores Wall Street's ties with investment bankers, specifically, Citigroup. The documentary episode further outlines how Wall Street drove the telecom boom and subsequent bust. Interview transcripts, transcript pulls and transcript editing pulls form the bulk of this subseries with shoot books and other production files such as reporting memoranda and stock footage files particularly well represented. Arranged alphabetically by topic or material type.

broadcasts. The majority of the articles consists of drafts of Smith's New York Times articles from 1976 to 1984. Smith also filed drafts and printed articles in his research files for The Russians and in the Subject File. The early articles document Smith's tenure as a staff reporter covering the civil rights movement in the South and space exploration for United Press International from 1959 to 1962.

Papers relating to Smith's best-selling books The Russians, The New Russians, and The Power Game include research material, notebooks, and notes. The Russians focused on the daily lives of the Russian people under the Communist system, while The New Russians explored the change for Soviet citizens with the introduction of glasnost (openness) and perestroika (restructuring). Among the prominent subjects in files related to The Russians are Russian culture, dissent, nationalities and minorities, religion, the economy, United States/Soviet relations, and the exodus of Jews. Subject files on dissent also include extensive material relating to dissidents Aleksandr Galich, Roy Aleksandrovich Medvedev, Zhores A. Medvedev, Andrei Sakharov, Aleksandr Isaevich Solzhenitsyn, and Vladimir Vysotsky. The Solzhenitsyn files include items relating to a meeting with Smith and Washington Post reporter Robert Kaiser in 1972 and a second interview with Solzhenitsyn two years after his expulsion from the Soviet Union. These files also contain material pertaining to the publication of a revised edition of The Russians in 1983.

The New Russians chronicles the reforms in the Soviet Union under Mikhail Gorbachev and how the Soviet people coped with these changes. Subjects represented are nationalities, politics, consumer and economic issues, Mikhail Sergeevich Gorbachev, and glasnost in the media and in intellectual expressions. There is overlap between the research files for this book and files for Smith's television production, "Inside Gorbachev's USSR," since many of the same topics are featured in both series.

In The Power Game Smith turned his attention to national politics in the United States, focusing on Congress and the executive branch primarily during the presidency of Ronald Reagan. The bulk of this material consists of interview transcripts, notebooks, and notes. Topics featured are lobbying, arms control, defense policies, and the power of Congressional staff. Individuals interviewed for The Power Game include Les Aspin, Howard H. Baker, James Addison Baker, Richard Gordon Darman, Michael K. Deaver, Robert J. Dole, Newt Gingrich, Robert C. McFarlane, Tip O'Neill, John M. Poindexter, and Donald T. Regan. Files for a potential book entitled "Three Presidents: Three Decisions" focus on three critical foreign policy events, the Cuban missile crisis in 1962 during John F. Kennedy's administration, the deescalation of the war in Vietnam before Lyndon Johnson's announcement not to seek reelection in 1968, and the decision by Richard M. Nixon to invade Cambodia in 1970. Also filed with the "Three Presidents" material are items for a projected publication with fellow Times reporter William Beecher on America's "Vietnam turnaround."

BOX 97-138	Part I: Television Productions, 1956-1990 The Part I: Television Productions series, 1956-1990, includes interviews, research files, notes, notebooks, and scripts documenting Smith's roles as commentator and writer primarily for the productions "Inside Gorbachev's USSR" and "The Power Game." The Gorbachev program provided American viewers with a close look at the Soviet people and dealt with the conflict between reform and the old political system, the efforts toward glasnost in the media, and the escalation of ethnic tensions in some of the Soviet republics. "The Power Game," adapted from Smith's book of the same title, provided an analysis of behind-the-scenes efforts by politicians to gain power and keep it and how they at times used or misused their power. Interview notebooks for "The Power Game" also include transcripts of Smith's introductory comments or "standups" as well as government hearings and speeches. Arranged alphabetically by name of production and therein by topic or type of material.

Part I: Subject File, 1957-1990

Both this series and Part I: Notebooks primarily document Smith's years as a correspondent and bureau chief stationed in Washington, D.C. Topics include the reorganization of Carter's cabinet, peace in the Middle East, Strategic Arms Limitation Talks, the presidential campaigns of 1980 and 1984, Central America, and United States/Soviet relations. This series also contains extensive material concerning the Vietnam conflict during the Nixon administration and Smith's coverage of the Vietnam peace talks in Paris from May through November 1968. Also included are items relating to the Pentagon Papers wiretapping suit in which Smith sued Nixon and officials in his administration for tapping Smith's telephone for several months in 1969.

Arranged alphabetically by name of person or organization, topic, or type of material.

Part II: Speeches and Writings File, 1960-2010

The Speeches and Writings File contains documentation regarding Smith's public appearances and written publications, with the bulk of the material concerning his book Rethinking America (1995). The series includes correspondence, notes, and printed matter on topics Smith was researching for speeches, interviews, books, and articles. The bulk of the writings material consists of drafts, research, and administrative material related to Rethinking America, Smith's 1995 book that was based on his "Challenge to America" documentary. Also present is administrative material and correspondence related to his books The Russians (1975), Reagan, the Man, the President (1980), The Power Game (1987), and The New Russians (1990), along with one folder of research material related to Who Stole the American Dream (2012). Articles he produced, many based on the topics of his books, are included under the publication name. A digital file contains various documents related to Smith's various engagements. Material types include correspondence, notes, drafts, research, reviews, schedules, contracts, digital files, and memoranda.

Arranged alphabetically by type of material. The file structure of the digital content maintained as received.

Part II: Television Productions, 1986-2009

Part II: Television Productions makes up the overwhelming majority of Part II of the collection, chronicling the many documentaries Smith created for the Public Broadcasting Service (PBS) and Frontline. These documentaries cover a variety of topics generally viewed through the lens of the American working class. Highlights include programs such as “Challenge to America,” which explores how the American economy, and especially automobile manufacturing, contrasts to the German and Japanese economies with regard to treatment of employees, and “Surviving the Bottom Line,” which continues such themes and explores the decision-making of chief executive officers and their effects on employees and the shift in education to better prepare workers for the American economy. “Making Schools Work” continues the theme of school reform, while “Juggling Work and Family” looks at the pressures of working class families balancing their jobs and family and the unions and corporations that are accommodating them. “Critical Condition” covers the healthcare industry and insurance companies’ conflict of profit-seeking versus providing care, especially regarding the chronically ill.

Smith’s other documentaries expand his focus beyond the working class while still exploring diverse American communities. “Across the River,” looks at community-building efforts in low-income neighborhoods in Washington D.C. “Seeking Solutions” examines community grassroots programs, including local responses to hate crimes in South Carolina. “Duke Ellington’s Washington,” a biography of jazz composer Duke Ellington, also documents the African American community of Washington D.C. “The People and the Power Game” investigates American politics and the influence of lobbyists and the media, as well as the Republican-led U.S. House of Representatives and House Speaker Newt Gingrich and Bill Clinton’s presidential administration. Additional topics covered in his documentaries include retirement, campaign finance reform, Enron Corp., Wal-Mart, water pollution, Dave Brubeck, tax evasion, and investment banking.

This series contains a range of material used in the production of Smith’s television documentaries, including production bibles, interview transcripts, research files, segment planning documents, notes, correspondence, digital files, and printed matter. All recordings

"Across the River" explores community-building efforts in low-income neighborhoods with high crime rates situated across the Anacostia River in Washington, D.C.

Organizations profiled in this documentary include the Alliance of Concerned Men, the Anacostia-Congress Heights Partnership, the Marshall Heights Community Development Organization, the Parklands community, and mentorship programs at Draper Elementary School and Anacostia High School's Public Service Academy.

Research files documenting the missions and activities of the various organizations profiled in the film form a large part of this subseries. Interview transcripts and segment planning materials, which includes files related to a town-hall style community forum hosted by Smith, further illustrate the people involved in these grassroots efforts to revive Washington, D.C. neighborhoods. The Alliance of Concerned Men is also profiled in Smith's documentary, "Seeking Solutions."

Arranged alphabetically by topic or material type. The file structure of the digital content maintained as received.

	This subseries contains segment planning material, interview transcripts, digital files, and research files related to Smith's Public Broadcasting Service Frontline episode, "Bigger than Enron," which delves into the collapse of the Enron Corporation and Arthur Anderson LLP and traces the oversight failures that allowed corporate executives to commit financial fraud. This documentary more broadly explores the world of corporate accounting and the many financial accounting schemes companies like Sunbeam Products and Waste Management used to promote short-term growth against its long-term interests. Material pertaining to the many interviews Smith conducted for this production form the bulk of the subseries and includes transcripts, notes, and transcript pulls. Files related to the publicity plans and viewer response to the episode are also included.

has allowed the election system to be overwhelmed by the volume of money. The segment “Big Sugar-Sweet Deal” looks at campaign contributions and their ability to influence legislation, with a specific example of the sugar industry’s lobbying for import restrictions. The final segment, “Reform - As Maine Goes...?” focuses on the efforts of campaign finance reform, and specifically the push for public financing of elections in Maine and the McCain-Feingold proposal (later the Bipartisan Campaign Reform Act). Materials include research, interview transcripts, and segment planning documents.

"Can You Afford to Retire?," 1998-2006

This subseries contains segment planning material, research files, and interview transcript and transcript pulls related to Smith's Public Broadcasting Service Frontline episode, "Can You Afford to Retire?," which explores the shift away from employer-sponsored retirement plans in America's private sector workforce. This documentary more broadly details the rise and fall of corporate pension funds and the move to 401k retirement accounts and covers the impact that United Airlines' Chapter 11 bankruptcy had on its employee's pension plans.

"Challenge to America," 1991-1998

In "Challenge to America," the first major documentary from Hedrick Smith Productions, Smith contrasts the American economy with Germany and Japan, highlighting the differences to urge reform among large United States corporations in the face of an increasingly global market. The four-part series sees Smith interviewing the leaders of major companies such as Mitsubishi Jūkōgyō Kabushiki Kaisha, Toyota Jidōsha Kabushiki Kaisha, Daimler-Benz Aktiengesellschaft, Airbus Industrie, Ford Motor Company, Boeing Company, General Motors Corporation, International Business Machines Corporation, and Motorola among others. Program one, "Old Ways New Game," looks at how global competition has changed companies and the strategies companies in the automobile and information technology industries adopted. Program two, "The Heart of the Nation," compares the educational systems in the United States, Germany, and Japan and how those systems prepare students entering the work force. Program three, "The Culture of Commerce," looks at the roles of Chief Executive Officers (CEOs) and their role in shaping the companies, and the limits to their power in other countries as they balance share-holder and labor interests. Program four, "Winning Strategies," details five American success stories that echo the lessons from Germany and Japan. In addition to the four programs, Smith interviewed President Bill Clinton about his administration's response to the problems raised by the series. Preliminary work and research on a follow-up to "Challenge to America," which eventually became "Surviving the Bottom Line." is also featured in this series. Materials include interview

"Critical Condition," 1997-2001

"Critical Condition" is a four-part series that investigates the American healthcare system.

The first segment, "The Quality Gap," looks at how medical errors kills thousands of Americans every year. Specific story topics include a Veterans Affairs hospital and how heart surgeries are reported in New York and Northern New England hospitals. "The Chronically Ill" explores how managed care is covered by insurance companies Humana and Kaiser Permanente. As the financial objectives of insurance companies conflict with treating chronically ill patients, coverage is often denied. "The Idealistic HMO" looks at Kaiser Permanente as a not-for-profit HMO (health maintenance organization) and their AIDS and diabetes programs, whose patients require costly continual treatment. "The Uninsured" segment focuses on the working poor, those with employers who do not provide health insurance cannot afford to pay for medical coverage on their own. Smith looks at Tenn-Care in Tennessee and the Child Health Insurance Program, both programs created to cover the uninsured, and how they both help and fall short in their efforts. This production was created in conjunction with "Dr. Solomon's Dilemma," and may contain related information. Materials include production bibles, interview transcripts, research, digital files, segment planning documents, and interview transcript pulls.

Arranged alphabetically by topic or material type.

BOX 327-332	"Dr. Solomon's Dilemma," 1998-2001 In Dr. Solomon's Dilemma, a Frontline production produced in conjunction with " Critical Condition ," Smith travels to Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center in Boston, Massachusetts to delve into the dilemmas facing doctors in weighing treatment versus cost when offering care to patients. Smith explores how high quality treatment may cost the hospital profits, and how patients are affected when health care decisions are not necessarily made in their best interests. Materials include interview transcripts, production bibles, publicity material, and research. Arranged alphabetically by topic or material type.

BOX 332-341	"Duke Ellington's Washington," 1998-2000 "Duke Ellington's Washington" chronicles the early life of American composer and jazz artist, Duke Ellington, and how the African American community in Washington, D.C. nurtured his talent. The documentary further explores the celebrated past of Washington, D.C.'s Black community and the modern revival of that heritage. Files concerning stock footage, still image, and musical rights form a large portion of the subseries, as do files containing information about the film's funding and support and publicity plans and events. Photographs depict the production crew and documentary subjects in and around the U Street corridor in Washington, D.C., and also include interior and exterior images of the Howard Theatre in 2000, prior to its renovation. BOX 348-359	"Is Wal-Mart Good for America?," 2004 The retail chain Wal-Mart and the role the store plays in the American economy is explored in "Is Wal-Mart Good for America?." The documentary details the rise of Wal-Mart and how its ethos of cheap prices and high-volume sales lead to it becoming the largest retailer in the world. The film details how Wal-Mart's size allows it to dictate manufacturing in the United States and China. The demands Wal-Mart places on American companies in lowering prices often leads to those companies looking overseas to China to exploit cheaper labor for lower production costs. Materials include interview transcripts, production bibles, research, correspondence, and notes. Arranged alphabetically by topic or material type.

BOX 360-375	"Juggling Work and Family," 1996-2002 "Juggling Work and Family" examines the impact of working people's struggle to reconcile workplace expectations with family needs and chronicles progressive efforts by corporations and labor unions to alleviate the pressure for working couples and single parents. Material concerning subject scouting trips and shoot logistics in several different states form a large part of this subseries and documents the many locations, workplace initiatives, and companies the production company explored as potential subjects for this film. Employers and unions featured in this documentary and well-represented in the records include Hewlett-Packard Company, Baxter International, Marriott International, New York City's Local 1199 Service Employees International Union, and several Boston, Massachusetts based law firms, Goodwin Procter, chief among them. Notes and scouting reports for Johnson and Johnson are also included in this subseries. Several files reflect publicity efforts Smith used for this film and include information on screening events and a partnership with the public relations firm, Goodman Media International. The evolution of this film's concept and the various segments' focus is particularly well documented in a file containing feedback from the film's first rough-cut and files containing segment write-ups. Arranged alphabetically by topic or material type.

BOX 375-399	"Making Schools Work," 1999-2006 "Making Schools Work" explores how several school districts and school reform models across the United States made a difference in providing effective education programs for students. Material concerning location scouting trips and shoot logistics in seven different cities form a large part of this subseries and documents the many locations, education models, and school districts the production company explored as potential subjects for this film. Education models and districts featured in the documentary and reflected in the records include the Knowledge is Power Program (KIPP) at the KIPP 3D Academy in Houston, Texas; the Comer Process at the Jordan School in Chicago, Illinois; the Success For All program, implemented by Centennial Elementary School in Mount Vernon, Washington; High Schools that Work schools in Corbin, Kentucky; District 2 in New York City, New York; the Charlotte-Mecklenburg School District in Charlotte, North Carolina; and the San Diego School District in San Diego, California. Files concerning financial support illustrate the evolution of the film and trace the origin of this project back to 2002, shortly after President George W. Bush passed the No Child Left Behind Act. Arranged alphabetically by topic or material type.

BOX 401-421	"The People and the Power Game," 1995-1996 "The People and the Power Game" was a documentary series made in conjunction with PBS's Democracy Now project in the leadup to the 1996 presidential election. The documentary is divided into two segments, "The Unelected: The Lobbies and Media" and "The Elected: The Presidency and Congress." The media portion of "The Unelected" segment focuses on print and network news and their coverage of politics in the 1990s with a focus on tabloid-style news and ratings, such as the Bill Clinton and Gennifer Flowers story. News anchors Peter Jennings and Dan Rather are profiled in this segment. The lobbyist portion of the "The Unelected" details the relationships business and special interest groups have with the Republican-led Congress. The tobacco industry,

United Parcel Service (UPS), and the health-care industry are profiled. Moving to the politicians themselves in "The Elected" segment of the series, Smith first takes a look at the American presidency and how much power the institution holds. Smith interviews Al Gore, Leon Panetta, and George Stephanopoulos, to understand the difficulties the Clinton administration had in passing its agenda despite controlling both houses of Congress. Moving from the presidency, Smith finally looks at the Republican-led Congress elected in 1994, and profiles Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich. Other congressmen interviewed include Robert Dole, Richard Gephardt, and Tom Daschle. This series also produced two companion pieces for The NewsHour with Jim Lehrer: "The Republican Freshman" and "Campaign Finance: Abuses and Reform." Material in this series includes production bibles, digital files, interview transcripts, research, and segment planning documents.

BOX 421-441	"Poisoned Waters," 2005-2009 In "Poisoned Waters," Smith explores how, more than two decades after the passage of the Clean Water Act, the water quality in the Puget Sound and the Chesapeake Bay remains poor, with both estuaries and the species living in and around them greatly affected by polluted runoff from industry, agriculture, and suburban development. Research files specific to the environment surrounding the Puget Sound and Chesapeake Bay make up the bulk of this series and include interview preparation notes and interview summaries. Interviews with the many subjects appearing in this documentary are further chronicled by the many transcript pulls, which are arranged by both topic and interview subject name. Segment planning files and shoot books also comprise a large portion of this subseries and trace shoot logistics as well as the development and evolution of reporting angles and story concepts. Many of the support files detailing financial contributions and fundraising were treated for mold. Arranged alphabetically by topic or material type.

BOX 455-479	"Seeking Solutions," 1996-2001 "Seeking Solutions" highlights communities across the country that successfully implemented grassroots solutions to address local crime and build stronger community networks. Production bibles, digital files, segment and shoot planning materials, and interview transcripts document the communities profiled in the film and include responses to hate crimes in South Carolina and San Clemente, California and adult mentorship programs aimed at preventing teen violence fostered by the Alliance of Concerned Men in Washington, D.C. and Los Hermanos Youth Crime Prevention Program at the Oregon State Penitentiary. Examples of effective community building in the Uptown neighborhood of Chicago, Illinois and Blue Hills neighborhood of Kansas City, Missouri also feature in the documentary film and in the records. Material documenting the various sources of financial support for the film reflect the evolution of this project, from its initial proposal and film outline titled "Coming Together," to its final form. Some of the content used in this documentary, namely footage of Washington, D.C.'s Alliance of Concerned Men, is also used in the Hedrick Smith Productions' film, " Across the River. " Arranged alphabetically by topic or material type.

how many Americans struggle to survive. The series begins with “Running With the Bulls,” a look at corporate America and how chief executive officers (CEOs) grapple with investors from Wall Street to balance running companies while promoting stock growth. Through interviews with former executives, Hedrick Smith covers the merger of Chase and Chemical Banks, the rapid expansion of ValuJet, and the cost cutting of CEO Albert J. Dunlap at Sunbeam Products. In “Living on the Fault Line,” Smith travels to San Diego to explore the transition the city made from manufacturing to high-tech industry. One example is Qualcomm, which compensates its engineers and programmers well, but relies on temporary employment for its manufacturing division. Personal stories of these temporary employees are told, and illustrate the hardships of needing to work over sixty to eighty hours per week to keep benefits at the expense of seeing their families. “Learning to Survive” explores the ways public education is adapting to the challenges of a changing economy and how schools are preparing students for the workforce. Smith travels to two schools in Shanghai, China; the Alliance Schools Initiative in the Rio Grande Valley of Texas; the Academy of Health and Bioscience in Oakland, California; and the Cincinnati State Technical and Community College; to detail the different programs these schools are offering to prepare students for a global economy. Finally, in “Beating the Bottom Line,” Smith looks at how various company executives have changed their approaches in managing profits by sharing with employees to lessen the wealth gap. Companies visited include the Hathaway Shirt Company and their partnership with Waterville, Maine to help keep the company afloat despite cheaper imported textiles; and Harman International’s refusal to lower costs by moving its production to Mexico. Labor unions and their roles in protecting jobs in a Newport News, Virginia shipyard and Northwest Airlines is also covered. Finally, Smith travels to the Netherlands to interview the president of Holland’s Social Economic Council, and learns of the various worker protections the Dutch government provides for its citizens. Some footage from this documentary was used for the The NewsHour with Jim Lehrer production of “High Skills Tech Gap.” Material in this subseries includes production bibles, digital files, interview transcripts, and segment planning documents.
