Acquisition Information

The papers of George Lardner, journalist and author, was given to the Library of Congress by Lardner in 1999. Lardner made additional donations between 2000 and 2006.

Processing History

Part I of the George Lardner Papers was arranged and described in 2000 by Nan Thompson Ernst, Melinda Friend, and Michael Womack with the assistance of Brian McGuire, John Monagle, Kathryn Sukites, and Chanté Wilson. Additional material received between 2000 and 2006 was processed and described as Part II in 2019 by Colleen Benoit Kim with the assistance of Emily Flint and Laney Stevenson. A significant portion of Part II was remediated for mold. While the documents were treated for active mold spores, stains and discoloration remain in some places.

Transfers

Sound recordings and video recordings have been transferred to the Motion Picture, Broadcasting, and Recorded Sound Division where they are identified as part of the George Lardner Papers. Patrons are encouraged to contact the Motion Picture, Broadcasting, and Recorded Sound Division in advance of a research visit.

Scope and Content Note

The papers of George Lardner (1934-2019) span the years 1923-2005 with the bulk of the material dating from 1965 to 2001. The collection focuses on Lardner's career as an investigative reporter with the Washington Post and extensively documents his research into a wide variety of national news stories. The papers are arranged into two parts described below.

Part I

Part I of the Lardner papers span the years 1923-1997, with the bulk of the material dating from 1965 to 1995 and documents his career as a reporter and as a commentator in other journals and magazines. Lardner maintained topical files that are organized as an alphabetical Subject File series comprising the majority of the papers. A small Miscellany series completes the collection.

The Subject File reflects the manner in which Lardner acquired, received, and pursued information and then developed his research into news stories. It includes Lardner's articles, correspondence, interviews, notes, and the research material he collected as documentary evidence. Research material includes newspaper and related clippings, reports, legal documents and trial records, government documents, some of which were obtained through Freedom of Information Act requests, congressional hearing records, photographs, and printed matter. Although Lardner's subject terms have been largely retained, personal names have been modified where necessary to conform to name authority standards of the Library of Congress.

Lardner's long tenure with the Washington Post allowed him to follow topics for many years, reporting from various angles as fresh information became available. Subjects branch into subcategories for ongoing stories of several years' duration, such as the court cases of the Iran-Contra Affair. In other instances, succeeding stories arise out of new lines of inquiry. Lardner's files on the Central Intelligence Agency, for example, contain material from twenty years of news gathering and reporting. Lardner's focus was on reform efforts and congressional oversight of intelligence activities, beginning with his coverage of investigations by the "Church Committee," the United States Senate Select Committee to Study Government Operations with Respect to Intelligence Activities led by Senator Frank Church. Other intelligence-related subjects in the collection include spy cases, terrorism, the National Security Agency, and the Federal Bureau of Investigation, which cover, in particular, the COINTELPRO domestic intelligence program, wiretapping, electronic surveillance, use of lie detectors, and reform efforts.

Lardner's political investigations often concern corruption, wrongdoing, and conflicts of interest. His records of the Watergate Affair involve the trials, campaign funding scandals, especially the Milk Fund investigation, impeachment issues, and government and media access to Richard M. Nixon's recordings of conversations in the Oval Office. During the administration of Jimmy Carter, Lardner investigated William A. "Billy" Carter and Hamilton Jordan and reported on the "Floodgate" scandal centering on representative Daniel J. Flood of Pennsylvania and allegations of influence peddling, bribes, and Mafia connections. Abscam and Brilab files cover federal law enforcement "sting" operations.

During the Ronald Reagan administration, Lardner's files concern a number of investigations, usually led by special prosecutors. Extensive files are available for the investigations of Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan. Material concerning the Wedtech investigation relates to improper influence to gain military contracts and is filed under the company name, Wedtech, with related material filed under Franklyn C. "Lyn" Nofzinger, Edwin Meese, and E. Robert Wallach. Files on Oliver North and the Iran-Contra Affair concern the sale of arms to Iran in exchange for hostages and the diversion of money from that sale to the Contras in Nicaragua. Iran-Contra investigations continued into the George Bush administration.

Political assassinations are a prominent feature of Lardner's files, especially the assassination of John F. Kennedy. The Kennedy file includes material on Jim Garrison's prosecution in 1967 of various figures in New Orleans. Lardner later obtained documents from the Central Intelligence Agency, Federal Bureau of Investigation, and other government agencies through the Freedom of Information Act and reported on developments in many conspiracy theories. He also covered the investigation of Kennedy's assassination by the United States House of Representatives Select Committee on Assassinations and, to a lesser extent, the committee's investigation of the assassination of Martin Luther King, Jr.

Political election campaigns are a minor subject in the collection. Presidential campaign files include coverage for some of the primaries in 1972 and 1976. Files on campaign spending concern the 1984 presidential race. Lardner's files include profiles he wrote of presidential candidates Frank Church, Phil Gramm, Gary Hart, Dan Quayle, Edward Moore Kennedy, Richard Lugar, and George C. Wallace.

Lardner wrote a series of articles on the Freedom of Information Act and followed the subject for some time, developing related stories concerning presidential papers administered by the National Archives and Records Administration. Other significant files include those for Ruby Ridge and Oklahoma City that concern confrontations of private citizens with federal law enforcement agencies. Ruby Ridge files cover a federal siege and shoot-out at the Randy Weaver home near Ruby Ridge, Idaho. The Oklahoma City files concern the bombing of a federal building in the city, with related material filed under militias. Files on the Mafia are mostly related to alleged political ties and corruption of unions.

Material in the Miscellany series on the Washington-Baltimore Newspaper Guild and Lardner's employment by the Washington Post Company document aspects of the working life of journalists.

Part II

Part II of the Lardner papers span the years 1956-2005, with the majority concentrated in the period between 1990 and 2001. In part, these papers supplement files in Part I and pertain to some of Lardner's earlier assignments in the 1960s, 1970s, and 1980s as a reporter covering national news for the Washington Post. The majority of Part II reflects later portions of Lardner's career at the Washington Post not represented in Part I and documents his assignments from the 1990s and early 2000s. The arrangement of the papers in Part II mirror that of Part I and are organized into the following series: Subject File and Miscellany.

Similar to the Subject File in Part I, the Subject File in Part II reflects the manner in which Lardner acquired, received, and pursued information and then developed his research into news stories. The series includes Lardner's articles, correspondence, interviews, notes, and the research material he collected as documentary evidence. Research material includes newspaper clippings, reports, legal documents and trial records, government documents, some of which were obtained through Freedom of Information Act requests, congressional hearing records, photographs, and printed matter. Lardner's subject terms and headings have been largely retained and represent the way he thought about and categorized his research. The organization of these papers reflect the high degree of interconnectedness often apparent in current events and news stories, with people, locations, and subjects appearing in various places across the collection.

Many of the earlier files in Part II complement those in Part I and provide continuation of Lardner's many investigations into intelligence agencies and policies, political corruption, and political assassinations. Prominent investigations continued in Part II include the Iran-Contra Affair, Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan, improper influence to gain military contracts by Wedtech, the assassination of Robert F. Kennedy, among other topics. Political election campaigns in 1968, 1970, 1972, 1976, and 1984 also complement Part I, especially the campaigns of George C. Wallace.

The majority of the Subject File reflects the stories Lardner followed in the later portion of his career at the Washington Post in the 1990s and early 2000s. These stories focus in large part on political figures and controversies and extensively chronicle the Bill Clinton and George W. Bush administrations. Lardner's investigations into the Clinton administration are varied and include allegations of Chinese influence and illegal fund raising tactics in the 1996 presidential election and improper access to personnel security-clearance documents in a controversy referred to as "Filegate." Many of the records pertaining to George W. Bush reflect research into his life and activities before being elected president in 2000. A significant portion of files chronicle Lardner's research into the assassination of John F. Kennedy for a thirtieth anniversary special television documentary titled Who Killed JFK: The Final Chapter?

Documents related to domestic violence, stalking laws, and the murder of Lardner's daughter, Kristin, in 1992 are represented to a lesser extent, but mark an important aspect of Part II of these papers. Notes, speech transcripts, and correspondence with readers document Lardner's work to expose the shortcomings of the criminal justice system to protect victims of stalking and domestic violence and to advocate for passage of the Violence Against Women Act. Research files include interview notes, statistics, and printed matter.

The Miscellany series chronicles Lardner's life apart from his investigative work and includes correspondence with his wife, Rosemary, and children, correspondence related to his involvement with the Fund for Investigative Journalism, and some writing projects. General correspondence with colleagues from the Washington Post and reader responses to some of Lardner's articles are contained in this series, as is Washington Post material that is administrative in nature, such as expense reports and contact lists.
