Acquisition Information

The papers of Ray S. Cline, intelligence analyst, educator, and author, were given to the Library of Congress by Cline in 1989 and 1994-1995.

Processing History

The Ray S. Cline collection was processed in 1994 by Bradley E. Gernand with the assistance of Lisa Madison and Jennifer Barbour and expanded in 1997 by Bradley E. Gernand. The finding aid was revised in 2010.

Transfers

Sound and video recordings have been transferred to the Library's Motion Picture, Broadcasting and Recorded Sound Division. Some photographs have been transferred to the Prints and Photographs Division. All transfers are identified in these divisions as part of the Ray S. Cline papers.

Other Repositories

Transcripts of interviews with Cline regarding the Cuban missile crisis, Bay of Pigs, and other Central Intelligence Agency operations are held by the Hoover Institution of Stanford University, Stanford, California, and the Lyndon Baines Johnson Library in Austin, Texas. Papers concerning the United States Army in World War II, the Operations Division of the War Department General Staff, and Cline's publication of The Washington Command Post in 1951 are located in the archives of Harvard University, Cambridge, Massachusetts. Cline's files created during his government intelligence career, including security classified information regarding the superpower contest over Cuba in 1961-1962, have been retained by the Central Intelligence Agency.

Copyright Status

Copyright in the unpublished writings of Ray S. Cline in these papers and in other collections of papers in the custody of the Library of Congress has been dedicated to the public.

Scope and Content Note

The papers of Ray Steiner Cline (1918-1996) span the years 1945-1994, with the bulk of the items concentrated during the period 1970-1994. Cline was a high-ranking United States Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) official during the Cuban missile crisis of October 1961 and the Bay of Pigs operation that followed and a vocal supporter of continued diplomatic relations with the Republic of China on Taiwan during the late 1970s. He founded, co-founded, or was associated with several organizations promoting increased American interest in the Far East. He also served as an intelligence adviser to presidential candidate George Bush and to the Ronald Reagan presidential transition team.

Part I

Part I of the Cline Papers consists of four series: an Office File, Organizations File, Conferences and Meetings File, and Writings File. The Office File includes calendars, interviews, press references to Cline, and testimony before congressional hearings and judicial proceedings regarding the proposed reorganization of American intelligence activities and intelligence-gathering effectiveness in the 1970s and 1980s.

The Organizations File consists of material created or accumulated by Cline while associated with various academic or policy institutions and organizations. By far the bulk of the file concerns the Center for Strategic and International Studies (CSIS) of Georgetown University, but included as well are papers relating to organizations such as the Coalition for Asian Peace and Security and the World Strategy Network.

The Conferences and Meetings File contains addresses, briefings, lectures, papers, and speeches prepared or delivered by Cline. Writings include manuscripts and published copies of articles, stories, and papers not specifically associated with a conference or meeting. Among the topics treated are the agencies, countries, events, and personalities, particularly American, Chinese, Korean, and Soviet, involved in intelligence and national security activities during the 1970s and 1980s.

Prominent among Cline's correspondents are George Bush, whose letters may be found in both George Bush and Ronald Reagan subject files among the CSIS materials, Chinese nationalist general and Hong Kong publisher Ho Shai-lai, Ernest W. Lefever, Clare Boothe Luce, Constantine Christopher Menges, Chiang Ching-kuo, president of the Republic of China, and Arthur M. Schlesinger (1917-2007), with whom Cline exchanged letters discussing their differences concerning the Cuban missile crisis.

Part II

Files in Part II are extensions of the four series in Part I and are arranged and described accordingly. Of note in the Organizations File is a copy of a memorandum dated 1945 by Cline regarding the wartime history of the Office of Strategic Services, forerunner of the CIA.

Arrangement of the Papers

The collection is arranged in two parts containing nine series:

Part I:

- Office File, 1971-1986
- Organizations File, 1971-1987
- Conferences and Meetings File, 1970-1986
- Writings File, 1974-1988
- Classified, 1971-1980

Part II:

- Office File, 1974-1994
- Organizations File, 1945-1988
- Conferences and Meetings File, 1977-1993
- Writings File, 1974-1993
