Provenance

The papers of Harry Wexler, geophysicist and meteorologist, were given to the Library of Congress by his wife in 1963. Additional material was transferred from the U.S. Weather Bureau in 1964 and from the Department of Commerce in 1971.

Processing History

The papers of Harry Wexler were arranged and described in 1963 and expanded and revised in 1981. The finding aid was revised again in 2011.

Transfers

Dictaphone records have been transferred to the Library's Motion Picture, Broadcasting, and Recorded Sound Division where they are identified as part of the Harry Wexler Papers.

Copyright Status

Copyright in the unpublished writings of Harry Wexler in these papers and in other collections in the custody of the Library of Congress is reserved. Consult a reference librarian in the Manuscript Division for further information

Access and Restrictions

The papers of Harry Wexler are open to research. Researchers are advised to contact the Manuscript Reading Room prior to visiting. Many collections are stored off-site and advance notice is needed to retrieve these items for research use.

Preferred Citation

Researchers wishing to cite this collection should include the following information: Container number, Harry Wexler Papers, Manuscript Division, Library of Congress, Washington, D.C.

Scope and Content Note

The papers of Harry Wexler (1911-1962) span the years 1929-1962 and relate mainly to his career as a geophysicist and meteorologist, with the focus on the years he was with the United States Weather Bureau, 1934-1942 and 1946-1962, and the Weather Service of the United States Air Force, 1942-1946. The collection consists of five series: General Correspondence; Speech, Lecture, and Article File; Subject File; Miscellany; and Printed Matter.

Prominent subjects include meteorological satellites (Tiros I), the use of high-speed computers for numerical weather prediction, and weather modification. Also in the collection are files relating to the United States expedition to the Antarctic for the International Geophysical Year, 1957-1958. Wexler was chief scientist for the expedition, and the journal he kept, 1955-1959, constitutes a detailed record of the mission. The collection also includes papers from his school years at Harvard University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Correspondents include Werner A. Baum, Charles Franklin Brooks, Hugh L. Dryden, Oren Harris, Henry G. Houghton, Jerome C. Hunsaker, Hugh Odishaw, Francis W. Reichelderfer, John Von Neumann, and Fred L. Whipple.

Arrangement of the Papers

This collection is arranged in five series:

- General Correspondence, 1929-1962

- Speech, Lecture, and Article File, 1930-1962
- Subject File
- Miscellany
- Printed Matter
