Summary: Henry Cowell was an American composer, theorist, writer, pianist, and teacher. A member of the 1920s "ultra-modernists," Cowell's experimental compositions explored a myriad of unusual instrumental techniques and non-Western musical sounds. Works such as The Aeolian Harp (1923), The Banshee (1925), and Mosaic Quartet (1935) are seminal examples of his exploration of 'tone clusters,' or secondal harmonies, for expanding the musical sound palette. Cowell was also a prolific writer and editor who founded The New Music Quarterly in 1927 as an outlet for the musical works of modern composers. This finding aid collates classed holograph manuscript scores, sketches, and parts by Cowell that were donated to the Music Division beginning in the 1950s.

Provenance

Gifts of Henry and Sidney Robertson Cowell, 1950s-1970s

Custodial History

Sidney Robertson Cowell continued to donate Henry Cowell's manuscript scores to the Music Division after his death in 1965.

Scope and Content Note

The Henry Cowell Music Manuscripts consist of holograph scores, sketches, and parts donated by the composer or his wife, Sidney Robertson Cowell, from the 1950s through the 1970s. The manuscripts provide an excellent representation of Cowell's compositional experimentation and include materials for several of his most notable works, such as The Aeolian Harp (1923), The Banshee (1925), and his extensive series of Hymn and Fuguing Tunes (1940s) for a variety of performing forces. These materials are classed in ML96.C823 (Case) and many are also available on microfilm.

Arrangement

The Henry Cowell Music Manuscripts are organized in one series:
