Acquisition Information

Gift, Erick Hawkins Dance Foundation, 2001-2002

Gift, Public Administrator of the County of New York, 2019

Custodial History

Following the death of company founder Erick Hawkins in 1994, the Erick Hawkins Dance Foundation Board of Directors chose the Library of Congress as its repository by unanimous vote in 1999, with the intention of including the personal papers of both Hawkins and Dlugoszewski. Before the first donation of papers and recordings was completed, composer Lucia Dlugoszewski, then company artistic director and Hawkins's widow, met an untimely death in 2000. Because she died intestate, the Public Administrator of the County of New York received the contents of her apartment, which contained records of the Erick Hawkins Dance Company as well as her own papers. In 2018, the Public Administrator's office donated papers and recordings of Dlugoszewski's estate to the Library of Congress, where her papers have been added to the Music Division's Erick Hawkins and Lucia Dlugoszewski Papers.

Accruals

Further accruals from the Erick Hawkins Dance Company and Foundation are expected.

Processing History

Elizabeth Aldrich and Sarah Bliss processed the initial gifts from the Erick Hawkins Dance Foundation in 2007. In 2016, Kate Doyle reprocessed the music scores. Emily Baumgart, Janet McKinney, Rachel McNellis, K. Mitchell Snow, and Libby Smigel reprocessed the collection in 2019-2021. McNellis wrote the biographical information in 2020, and Baumgart coded the finding aid in 2021. The 2019 gift was processed and coded by Baumgart, McKinney, McNellis, and Smigel, along with Pamela Murrell, in 2021-2022.

Transfers

Sound and video recordings from both gifts constituting the Erick Hawkins and Lucia Dlugoszewski Papers have been transferred to the Library of Congress Motion Picture, Broadcasting, and Recorded Sound Division where they are identified as the Erick Hawkins and Lucia Dlugoszewski Papers (MAVIS no. 17671). Carriers are in a variety of formats, including U-matic tapes, VHS, open reel audiotapes, lacquer discs, audiocassettes, and long-playing records. Many items are non-commercial and may be the only extant recordings of their respective works. An inventory of this material is available in the Music Division's collection file.

Biographical Note: Erick Hawkins

Frederick (later "Erick") Hawkins was born to Eugene G. and Myrtle M. Hawkins on April 23, 1909, in Trinidad, Colorado. He graduated from Harvard University with a degree in Greek Civilization in 1932. While a student, he became acquainted with modern dance and went to Europe to study with choreographer-performer Harald Kreutzberg. In 1934, Hawkins enrolled as one of the first students at the School of American Ballet, which George Balanchine and Lincoln Kirstein founded that same year. Between 1934 and 1938, Hawkins danced with Balanchine's American Ballet and Kirstein's Ballet Caravan. In 1937, the Ballet Caravan performed Hawkins's first choreographed work, Show Piece, which he developed with music by Robert McBride and set by Keith Morrow Martin.

In 1936, Hawkins studied at the renowned Bennington School of Dance summer program in Bennington, Vermont, where he first met Martha Graham. In 1938, he danced in her work American Document and officially joined her dance company as the first male dancer the following year. Hawkins's outreach to Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge secured funding from the Coolidge Foundation for the collaboration of Aaron Copland and Graham on the masterwork Appalachian Spring. For the premiere of the dance in 1944 at the Library of Congress Coolidge Auditorium, Hawkins danced the male lead. Graham and Hawkins married in 1948, but Hawkins separated from both Graham and the Martha Graham Dance Company in the early 1950s; they were divorced in 1959.

After leaving Graham's company, Hawkins developed his own vision of a dance technique grounded in kinesiology and studied Labanotation, ultimately creating his own system of dance notation. His New York City dance studio became a center for transmitting his dance technique to several generations of modern dancers, and the significance of his lectures, workshops, and performances brought him and his company to college campuses and arts centers across the United States. His dances often display a variety of influences, including Native American ceremonies, Zen Buddhism and Japanese poetry, nature, and Greek mythology. His early dances especially evince his grapplings with philosophical concepts and the physical world.

In 1951, Hawkins founded the Erick Hawkins Dance Company to perform his choreography. In seeking nonprofit status, the company initially operated under the name Foundation for Modern Dance. In 1968 the name was changed to the Erick Hawkins Dance Foundation, Inc., under which the Hawkins company and dance studio operated. From the beginning, he was adamant that they perform solely to live music, and he began a life-long personal and professional collaboration with emerging experimental composer Lucia Dlugoszewski. They premiered their first collaborative work titled openings of the (eye) on January 15, 1952. Their first major success was Here and Now, with Watchers, which the Erick Hawkins Dance Company premiered at Hunter College in 1957. Early Floating (1961), Cantilever (1963), Tightrope (1968), Black Lake (1969), Angels of the Inmost Heaven (1971), Avanti (1980), and Each Time You Carry Me This Way (1993) are among their many other works. Hawkins and Dlugoszewski married secretly in 1962 and remained together until his death.

Eventually Hawkins formed the Hawkins Theatre Orchestra, which offered greater opportunities for the kinds of music commissions he sought. The ensemble, which consisted of seven or more instrumentalists, often toured with the company. Among the composers who provided scores for his dances were Henry Cowell, Alan Hovhaness, Charles Mills, Tōru Takemitsu, Virgil Thompson, and Wallingford Riegger. Hawkins also engaged visual artists such as Isamu Noguchi, Helen Frankenthaler, and Arch Lauterer, as well as designer Ralph Lee and sculptor Ralph Dorazio. Hawkins's dance Plains Daybreak, which premiered in 1972, was the culmination of many years of research and became one of his best-known collaborative works. Alan Hovhaness composed the music and Ralph Lee was responsible for creating the masks and designing the set. Hawkins also collaborated with major symphony orchestras to perform some of his larger works. Many Thanks, set to Lucia Dlugoszewski's music, premiered in 1994 and was the final work that Hawkins choreographed. On October 14, 1994, President Bill Clinton awarded Hawkins the National Medal of the Arts. He died in New York City on November 23, 1994.

Biographical Note: Lucia Dlugoszewski

Lucille (later "Lucia") Dlugoszewski was born to Polish immigrants Chester and Jennie Dlugoszewski in Detroit, Michigan, on June 16, 1925. Her father, a tool and die maker, and her mother, a lover of music and nature, likely contributed to Dlugoszewski's interests and ability in mathematics and the arts. She began studying piano at an early age at the Detroit Institute of Music. She initially chose the pre-medical program when she matriculated at Wayne State University, but her transcript shows she eventually abandoned sciences in favor of arts and languages. In 1949, she received a fellowship to study piano with Grete Sultan and music composition and theory with Edvard Varèse in New York City, where she met John Cage, who offered her mentorship and friendship during those early years.

In her earliest compositions, Dlugoszewski focused on incorporating sounds from everyday life into music. Her first work, Moving Space Theater Piece for Everyday Sounds, premiered in Detroit in 1949. In 1952, her performance of Structures for the Poetry of Everyday Sounds in New York was met with great praise among composers, including Cage. Dlugoszewski then began exploring new ways of playing the piano, such as using a variety of objects to play directly on the strings inside the instrument, a technique that she termed as the "timbre piano." This technique created a broad and diverse sound palette and became a central element in many of her instrumental works and dance scores.

Dlugoszewski began collaborating with Erick Hawkins in 1952. They were an ideal pair because of their mutual affinity for Zen Buddhism and nature, as well as a shared philosophy that the creator should not impose his or her interpretation of a work onto the listener or observer. They premiered their first work, openings of the (eye), on January 15, 1952. She composed more than 25 dance scores for Hawkins, including Early Floating (1961), Cantilever (1963), Geography of Noon (1964), Tightrope (1968), Black Lake (1969), Angels of the Inmost Heaven (1971), Avanti (1980), and Each Time You Carry Me This Way (1993).

In 1958, Dlugoszewski composed Suchness Concert, a percussion duet for which she invented more than a hundred new instruments. Sculptor and designer Ralph Dorazio, a friend from Detroit, built the instruments according to her models and drawings, and Dlugoszewski reused them in many of her other compositions. Later that same year, she premiered the first solo exhibition of her works at the jazz club The Five Spot Café. The program included Music for Small Centers (1958) and Archaic Timbre Piano Music, which was an adaptation of Here and Now, with Watchers. Dlugoszewski and Dorazio applied for a marriage license in 1950, but no evidence has been found that the wedding took place or that a divorce was recorded. Dorazio later married Dlugoszewski's childhood friend and New York roommate Mary Norton. Dlugoszewski secretly married Hawkins in Michigan in 1962; they remained together until his death in 1994.

Dlugoszewski's other collaborations included several productions for The Living Theatre, an experimental theatre company that Julien Beck and Judith Malina established in 1947. She also composed music for three films: Marie Menken's Visual Variations on Noguchi (1953 version), Jonas Menken's Guns of the Trees (1962), and Maryette Charlton's Zen in Ryoko-in (1971). In 1971, she composed two works for brass quintet that were later used for Hawkins's dances Angels of the Inmost Heaven and Of Love. The prestigious American Brass Quintet performed at the latter work's premiere. Two years later, composer and conductor Pierre Boulez commissioned the trumpet concerto Abyss and Caress, which the New York Philharmonic premiered in 1975. Dlugoszewski received many prestigious awards for her concert works during the 1970s, a period when she took a leave from the Hawkins Dance Company to pursue her interests in instrumental composing. In 1971, her Tender Theatre Flight Nagiere was nominated for the Pulitzer Prize, and two years later she received a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts. In 1978, she became the first woman to receive the Koussevitzky International Recording Award for Fire Fragile Flight (1973).

Dlugoszewski composed few works during the 1980s and 1990s as she dealt with the health of her parents and her spouse, and many of the compositions from this period remain unfinished. Two years after Erick Hawkins died, she succeeded him as the artistic director for the Erick Hawkins Dance Company, and she began choreographing her own dances. In 1999, her choreographed work Radical Ardent premiered at the 92nd Street Y Harkness Project. She also premiered three of Erick Hawkins's unfinished works: Journey of a Poet (for Mikhail Baryshnikov) and Last Love Duet in 1997, and Why does a Man Dance in 1999. Dlugoszewski was found dead in her home on April 11, 2000, after she failed to appear during final preparations for the premiere of her choreographed work Motherwell Amor.

Historical Note: Erick Hawkins Dance Company

Modern dancer Erick Hawkins (1909–1994) established the Erick Hawkins Dance Company in 1951 to perform his choreography. At some point, Hawkins adopted the name Foundation of Modern Dance, Inc., in order to incorporate the company as a 501(c)(3) nonprofit. The name of the nonprofit was changed to Erick Hawkins Dance Foundation, Inc., in 1968. The company's first production was openings of the (eye), which took place in New York on January 15, 1952. Widespread success came several years later with Here and Now, with Watchers, which premiered at Hunter College in New York in 1957. Both works featured the music of experimental composer Lucia Dlugoszewski (1925–2000), who married Hawkins in 1962 and composed more than 25 scores for his dances.

Hawkins insisted on live music for his company's performances. Initially, he relied primarily on Dlugoszewski's compositions, which she herself performed, but later he founded the Hawkins Theater Orchestra. This small ensemble of seven or more instrumentalists often toured with the dance company. The Erick Hawkins Dance Company also performed larger works with numerous major symphony orchestras, including the National Symphony Orchestra, Cleveland Orchestra, Denver Symphony, Buffalo Philharmonic, St. Paul Chamber Orchestra, and the St. Louis Symphony.

After Erick Hawkins died in 1994, Dlugoszewski assumed a primary leadership role including administrative and teaching duties, and by 1996 she had become his successor as artistic director. She choreographed dances for the company and completed several of Hawkins's unfinished choreographies. Since Dlugoszewski's death in 2000, the Erick Hawkins Dance Company has remained active and continues to conduct workshops, restage and license repertory and music, and perform programs that include both Hawkins's original choreography as well as new works.
