Scope and Content Note

The Robert Hernried Papers span from 1907 to 1951, with the bulk of the materials dating from 1937 to 1951. The Music series primarily consists of holograph scores for music Hernried composed and arranged, including lieder, motets, madrigals, sacred works, carols, solo works for woodwinds and piano, an opera, and a mass. Notably, there are four songs by Robert Schumann in the hand of his grandson Ferdinand.

The bulk of the letters in the Correspondence series are between Hernried and translator Theodora Lau. Though they primarily wrote to each other about the translations of his compositions from German to English, they also discussed their lives and families. Letters from other correspondents cover topics such as music and article publishing, guest lecturing, news from friends and colleagues, and employment opportunities. Hernried identifies two correspondents as belonging to the Nazi party.

The Writings series contains four articles written by Hernried and reviews of his opera The Peasant Woman (Die Bäuerin).

Testimonials from professors, employers, and fellow artists; military records; and articles written about Hernried largely comprise the Biographical Information series. There are also letters terminating Hernried's teaching position in Berlin in 1934 and the passenger manifest for the ship on which he sailed to New York in 1939.

Programs and a poster comprise the Programs and Publicity series. The programs are for performances Hernried attended, performances of his works, or performances of his students, and the poster advertises a performance of his Mass in D.

Organization of the Robert Hernried Papers

BOX 1-3

Series

Music, 1907-1949

This series contains music composed and arranged by Robert Hernried, as well as a Sonata by Ulrich Krueger and four songs by Robert Schumann in the hand of his grandson Ferdinand. The works by Hernried include popular songs, lieder, motets, madrigals, sacred works, carols, solo works for woodwinds and piano, an opera, and a mass. Nearly all works include a note by Hernried regarding such things as publication information, history, performances, editions, etc. Publishers mentioned include Carl Fischer Inc., Clayton F. Summy, Concordia Publishing, G. Schirmer, Galaxy Music, Gamble Hinged Music, George F. Briegel, J. Fischer & Bro., McLaughlin & Reilly, Neil A. Kjos, and Theodore Presser. In many cases, where the English translations of titles have been used, the titles in their original languages are noted. Works are holographs unless otherwise indicated.

Arranged in three file units.

Correspondence, 1907-1951

The correspondence between Hernried and translator Theodora Lau largely comprises this series. Although the material centers around translations of Hernried's compositions from German to English, they also discussed their lives over the course of this five-year exchange. Hernried confided his struggles and successes with work, emigration, health, and family, including his children and nephew, actor Paul Hernried. Letters from other correspondents cover such topics as music and article publishing, guest lecturing, news from friends and colleagues, employment opportunities, and Hernried's offers to serve the United States during World War II. There are two letters from acquaintances, Gerhard Parrhysius and Otto Wartisch, whom Hernried describes as belonging to the Nazi party.

Arranged alphabetically.

BOX 4

Writings, 1930-1949

This series consists of four articles written by Hernried and reviews of his opera The Peasant Woman (Die Bäuerin).

Arranged in two file units and alphabetically by title therein.

BOX 4-5

Biographical Information, 1909-1950

This series contains testimonials from professors, employers, and fellow artists; military records; and articles written about Hernried. Regarding his emigration to escape the Nazi regime are the letters terminating his teaching position in Berlin and the passenger manifest for the ship on which he sailed to New York in 1939.

Arranged chronologically.

BOX 3-4

Programs and Publicity, 1945-1950

Programs and one poster comprise this series. The poster advertises a performance of Hernried's Mass in D, and the programs are for performances he attended, performances of his works, or performances of his students.

Arranged alphabetically by format.
