Biographical Note

Benjamin Henry Latrobe and his students were responsible for establishing professional standards in the field of architecture in the United States. The majority of his extant architectural and engineering drawings are represented in the Latrobe architectural drawing archive (Library of Congress), consisting of designs spanning his career in the United States until his departure from Washington, D.C., two years before he died.

Born in England in 1764, Latrobe studied engineering with John Smeaton and architecture with Samuel Pepys Cockerell. He arrived in Norfolk, Virginia, in 1796 to take possession of an inherited parcel of land in Pennsylvania. The following year he engaged his first major architectural work in this country, the Virginia State Penitentiary. By 1803, Latrobe's reputation was so well established that he was asked by President Jefferson to work on the U.S. Capitol in the position of Surveyor of the Public Buildings. The next year he began work on the design for the Basilica of the National Shrine of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary (cathedral in Baltimore), which was considered by many to be his masterpiece. Concurrent to these undertakings, Latrobe worked on a major engineering project, the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal, before leaving in 1806. Because the War of 1812 interrupted the Capitol and cathedral building campaigns, Latrobe moved to Pittsburgh and became involved in steamboat-building with Robert Fulton. In 1815, he returned to Washington, D.C. to rebuild the war-damaged U.S. Capitol as Surveyor of the Capitol. He left his Capitol post in 1817, first to continue work in Baltimore, then to go to New Orleans in 1818, where his son had been overseeing his waterworks project and had died of yellow fever the previous year. Latrobe found further commissions in New Orleans, but died of yellow fever in 1820.

Scope and Content Note

Primarily architectural and engineering drawings by Benjamin Henry Latrobe for residential buildings, government buildings, canals, monuments, bank buildings, military buildings, health care facilities, engines, and waterworks in Washington, D.C., Pennsylvania, and Virginia. Among the designs represented in the archive are the U.S. Capitol, the White House, and Decatur House. Materials document various phases of the design process, from competition and presentation drawings to working drawings. The archive also includes landscape architecture drawings, interior design drawings, and naval architecture drawings, as well as architectural drawings formerly attributed to Latrobe.

Specific media or processes represented include graphite, ink, watercolor, and crayon.

Some ADE UNITS have additional materials to the drawings that are filed separately. If present, these series are noted at the end of the ADE UNIT's summary with the following options: specifications, photographs, and/or miscellaneous supplementary materials. These materials are not item inventoried but can be requested from a librarian while doing research in the Reading Room.

Arrangement

The Benjamin Henry Latrobe Archive is organized into 29 groups (called UNITS and LOTs), which are usually based on separate building projects. Items are arranged numerically within a UNIT according to the staff-assigned number.

Creator: Latrobe, Benjamin Henry, 1764-1820, architect

Call No.: ADE - UNIT 2886, no. 2v (C size)

Extent: 1 drawing : ink on paper.

Note: Inscription: "Explanation of the Vignette in the Titlepage. During my residence in Virginia from 1795 to 1799, the applications to me for designs were very numerous, and my fancy was kept employed in building castles in the air, the plans of which are contained in this Volume. The only two buildings which were executed from the drawings were CAPTN Pennocks house at Norfolk, and Colonel Harvies at Richmond. (p. 1 & ____). The former stands on terra firma in the background to the left, the latter on the hill in the middle ground. The Wings of Col. Harvie's were never built, & are thus following the other buildings into the sky. Higher up among the clouds, are the buildings which may easily be known by looking over the following drawings. To the right hovers the figure of the Architects imagination, such as she is. With the Model of the Bank of Pennsylvania in her hand, she is leaving the Rocks of Richmond & taking her flight to Philadelphia. The idea of the Figure is imitated from a figure by Flaxman, the celebrated Sculptor."
