Biographical Note

Alfred Bult Mullett was one of the most prolific, influential, and controversial architects working for the U.S. Government during the second half of the 19th century.

Mullett was born in England in 1834 and immigrated with his family to Ohio in 1842. He studied engineering and drafting at the Farmers College in Cincinnati and worked with Isaiah Rogers in that city. Mullett moved to Washington, D.C., with his Civil War regiment and, after its disbandment, began working for the Treasury Department. He was appointed Supervising Architect of the Treasury in 1866 and designed post offices, customhouses, court houses, and other federal government buildings for cities throughout the United States until his resignation in 1874. Also during this time, Mullett designed the State, War, and Navy Building, a commission that he claimed was outside the jurisdiction of the Treasury Department, for which he was not compensated. Mullett's architectural firm, established in 1875, was responsible for a major local advance in commercial architecture, the design of the Sun Building. While not large by New York or Chicago standards, at eight stories it was the tallest building in the city when it was completed in 1887. When sons Thomas A. Mullett and Frederick W. Mullett as well as James F. Denson, who worked as draftsmen in Mullett's architectural firm, were made partners in 1889 the name of the firm became A.B. Mullett & Co. The firm continued after A.B. Mullett's death in 1890, doing general work in the Washington, D.C., area and some in Charlestown, West Virginia. After Frederick Mullett's death in 1924, Thomas Mullett became associated with Russell O. Kluge. Kluge inherited the firm after Thomas Mullett's death in 1935 and operated it until he was drafted in the Second World War.

Scope and Content Note

The archive includes many examples of Mullett's designs completed during his tenure as Supervising Architect of the Treasury as well as drawings for the Sun Building. Also includes a representative sample of A.B. Mullett & Co.'s output spanning the first quarter of the 20th century. The collection consists primarily of architectural drawings for buildings in Washington, DC (designed between 1875 and ca. 1942) and for US federal government buildings in various cities (designed between 1866 and 1874). The projects for Washington, DC include: residential buildings, industrial buildings, commercial buildings, transportation buildings, religious buildings, and health care facilities. The federal government buildings include customhouses and post offices. Drawings for a skyscraper office building for the Baltimore Sun newspaper are also represented. Materials document various phases of the design process, from presentation drawings to working drawings and specifications relating to building projects. The archive also includes engineering drawings and source materials. Other creators represented in the collection include: Edward Clark (1822-1902); Leon E. (Leon Emil) Dessez (1858-1918); James G. Hill (1841-1913); Russell O. (Russell Ormond) Kluge (1894-1967); Henry H. Law; Robert Mills (1781-1855); Schulze and Goenner; Simmons & Cooper; Frank M. (Frank Miles) Snyder (1867-1939); Ammi B. (Ammi Burnham) Young (1799-1874) and the United States Department of the Treasury. Delineators are listed in the Notes field rather than the Related Names.

Specific media or processes represented include graphite, ink, blueprint, photographic print, and photomechanical print.

Some ADE UNITS have additional materials to the drawings that are filed separately. If present, these series are noted at the end of the ADE UNIT's summary with the following options: specifications, photographs, and/or miscellaneous supplementary materials. These materials are not item inventoried but can be requested from a librarian while doing research in the Reading Room.

Arrangement

The collection is organized into 125 groups (called UNITS or LOTS), which are usually based on separate building projects. Items are arranged numerically according to the staff-assigned UNIT or LOT number. Commission numbers are noted when available.
