Summary: The Königliche Preussische Messbildanstalt (Royal Prussian Photogrammetric Institute) created architectural photographs as part of an early historic preservation program to document exteriors and interiors of cathedrals and churches, castles and palaces, town halls and half-timbered buildings, and other cultural heritage sites as they appeared around 1900. The buildings are primarily in Germany, with approximately 100 views in Greece, Turkey, Lebanon, France, Poland, and Russia. Institute director and architect Albrecht Meydenbauer developed the special camera and precise measurement system used to create these sharply focused, large-format, photogrammetric (measurement) images in order to provide for the study and restoration of landmark buildings.

Provenance

Purchase; 1914; (DLC/PP-1914:44722) (Inventory control number was PR 06 CN 002).

Processing History

The Prints and Photographs Division (P&P) accessioned this collection in January 1914, which provides an upper limit for the dates of the photos. The initial processing was completed by the mid-1900s and included labeling the backs of the photo mounts with hand-written building and place names using predominantly English words and place names and some German words, sometimes putting phrases in parenthesis. The Messbildanstalt index numbers were also written on the photos. P&P changed the Messbildanstalt original order, which was alphabetical by city. Using a hierarchical geographic arrangement, P&P added a continent designation (abbreviated as "Eu" for Europe) and country name to the labels. These 732 photographs were stored upright on shelves in 21 four-flap portfolios.

In 2011, Brett Carnell created a basic container list. In 2021, Emma Esperon created an item-level contents list for this finding aid. Building names and locations are based on the item labels provided by previous P&P staff, which have not been extensively verified. Misspellings, mistranslations, and abbreviations were corrected when found. Library staff also added general descriptive language to supplement the staff created labels, including adding terms such as exterior, interior, nave, and arches. The photos often show more of the building than the description implies. For example, many of the "nave" photos also show altars, sculptures, and stained glass windows. In addition to spelling corrections, an attempt was made to translate building names, common German words, and modern city names; these are included in brackets. For example, the label "Rathouse" was changed to "Rathaus [Town Hall]" in the finding aid. The presence of people in the photographs was noted in a few cases. Finding aid encoded by Emma Esperon in 2021.

Researchers wishing to cite this collection should include the following information: Library of Congress, Prints & Photographs Division, Photographs selected from the Königliche Preussische Messbildanstalt, LOT 15198, and item or reproduction number, if available [e.g., LOT 15198, no. 1 or LC-USZ62-80392]

Biographical Note

Currently, approximately 20,000 photographs taken by the Königliche Preussische Messbildanstalt are held by the Messbildarchiv of the Brandenburgischen Landesamtes für Denkmalpflege und Archäologischen Landesmuseums (Brandenburg State Office for Monument Preservation and State Archaeological Museum).

The Königliche Preussische Messbildanstalt is also known as the Messbild-Anstalt, the Royal Prussian Photogrammetric Institute, and the Königlich Preussische Messbildanstalt. It was originally spelled in German as "Königliche Preussische Messbildanstalt," however recent publications drop the first 'e' and use "Königlich Preussische Messbildanstalt." The Institute was created in 1885 as part of the Ministry of Culture in the Kingdom of Prussia. Albrecht Meydenbauer (1834-1921) was the founding director and continued in that role until 1909. Trained as a civil engineer and surveyor, Meydenbauer began to work on photogrammetric documentation in 1858 after he almost fell while working high up in a cathedral and taking measurements by hand. Over the next 25 years, he developed specialized cameras and accurate measurement procedures and coined the term "photogrammetry." His campaign for the use of photogrammetric images as a valuable tool for architectural studies and historic preservation resulted in the Institute's documentation of more than 2,600 sites and the sale of prints to other institutions.

In 1921, the Institute was closed, and the program was transferred to the newly created Staatliche Bildstelle Berlin (State Image Office Berlin). At that time, the collection included over 21,000 measurement photographs, predominantly as 40 cm x 40 cm (close to 16 x 16 inch) glass plate negatives. The Staatliche Bildstelle Berlin continued to sell prints from the negatives but documented few historic buildings.

At the end of World War II, Soviet troops took the photo collection to Moscow. In 1958, the negatives were sent to the German Democratic Republic, and they were in several repositories before becoming part of the Brandenburg State Office for Monument Preservation in 1991. Today, the collection is held by the Messbildarchiv of the Brandenburgischen Landesamtes für Denkmalpflege und Archäologischen Landesmuseums (Brandenburg State Office for Monument Preservation and State Archaeological Museum).

Scope and Content Note

The Königlische Preussische Messbildanstalt (Royal Prussian Photogrammetric Institute) created these architectural photographs as part of an early historic preservation program to document exteriors and interiors of cathedrals and churches, castles and palaces, town halls and half-timbered buildings, and other cultural heritage sites as they appeared around 1900. The buildings are primarily in Germany, with approximately 100 views taken in Greece, Turkey, Lebanon, France, Poland, and Russia. Institute director Albrecht Meydenbauer developed the special camera and precise measurement system used to create these sharply focused, large-format, photogrammetry (measurement) images in order to provide for the study and restoration of buildings.

The Prints and Photographs Division selected 730 photographic prints from the thousands of photogrammetric images offered for sale by the Messbildanstalt. The selection represents an estimated 225 buildings located in 90 cities and towns in Germany (predominantly in the Kingdom of Prussia) as well as 41 sites in Greece; Constantinople, Turkey (now Istanbul); and Baalbek, Syria (now Lebanon). Close to 50% of the photographs show cathedrals and churches, 15% show castles and palaces, and 10% show ancient ruin sites in Greece and Baalbek. The remaining images depict town halls and half-timbered buildings, often with shops, among other structures. In addition to exterior views, there are interiors and details of Gothic, Baroque, Romanesque, and other architecture styles. People are visible in a few photos, primarily looking out of windows at the photographer. Street-level views that show multiple buildings are available for Berlin, Danzig, Duderstadt, Fritzlar, Görlitz, Halberstadt, and Wernigerode. Since this collection spans the 1880s to early 1910s, it documents a number of buildings destroyed in World War II, such as the Barfüsserkerche. Place names represent pre-World War I designations in the Kingdom of Prussia, and the finding aid provides current names for cities and countries, including Poland and Russia.

The sharply detailed, large format, prints are approximately 16 x 16 inches and mounted on board. Their clear focus precisely documents architectural elements. The prints were made from large format glass photographic negatives of the same size, created with a special camera that used standardized focal lengths and was placed at measured distances from the building being documented. The accuracy of the measurements made it possible to produce architectural drawings from which a building could be reconstructed if it were damaged. For images of the camera and detailed description of the technique, see articles in the bibliography.

For more information about photographs in this collection, refer to the Published Indexes. Each photograph in the collection has a Messbildanstalt index number that identifies the site and the image. (Some of these numbers repeat, even though the photo is different.) The index numbers below 900 correspond to entries in the published indexes from 1906 and 1907. The higher numbers are not in these catalogs. To find the year of a photo numbered below 900, use the Alphabetisches Verzeichnis der im Etatsjahre 1907 hinzugekommenen Messbildaufnahmen, (LOT 15198, no. 735) which also states the total quantity of views for each site. To find the original title, use the Alphabetisches Verzeichnis der Grossbilder von Messbild-Aufnahmen (1906) (LOT 15198, no. 734). Photographs of Greece are predominately listed in Griechenland enthaltend eine Auswahl von 443 Bildern (1912) (LOT 15198, no. 736).

Arrangement

The collection has two series: photographs and published indexes.

The photographs are organized by country with Germany preceding Greece, Turkey, and Lebanon. Within each country, the photographs are largely arranged alphabetically by city name. One exception is Arta, Greece, which is filed with the German cities. The country designations represent political boundaries before World War I, so a few locations in modern day France, Poland, and Russia are also filed with the German cities. The Library of Congress assigned the item numbers in a single sequence, starting with 1 through 732 for the photos and 733 through 737 for the published indexes. The original Messbildanstalt building or survey identification numbers were retained and labeled as "Index no."

BOX 22 Grossbilder-Katalog der Königl. Preuss. Messbildanstalt. Berlin, 1906

Call No.: LOT 15198, no. 733 (FM -- AA size)

Extent: 1 volume

Note: This catalog begins with 29-pages of mini-pictures that show a selection of 1,050 photos for 381 buildings in 145 cities. A title for each photo appears in the 21-page place name index at the end of the catalog, "Alphabetisches Verzeichnis der Grossbilder von Messbild-Aufnahmen." This index also correlates the master index number of a photo to its numeric placement in the visual catalog.

Note: The 1909 edition is online at HathiTrust with what appears to be the same 1,050 mini-pictures and additions to the index, which covers 1,064 photos for 384 buildings in 147 cities.
