Scope and Content Note

Selected typewritten or handwritten plays deposited in the United States Copyright Office that were subsequently transferred to the Rare Book and Special Collections Division due to their unique or noteworthy qualities. The collection is among the oldest of the extant plays, including examples of early items bound in leather and others that are handwritten. The collection also contains plays by well-known authors as well as a rich variety of plays including comedy sketches, monologues, musical revue, spectacles and other uniquely American works.

Submissions from well-known authors include Eugene O'Neill, (The Iceman Cometh) and Arthur Miller, (Death of a Salesman). Also of note are several vaudeville routines including an early George M. Cohan musical and several Aaron Hoffman vaudeville routines. One is titled, The Female Highwayman; monologue for Mark Sullivan (NY, 1902). Early filmmakers, such as D. W. Griffith, often adapted their film ideas from plays they had previously written. An example of an early Griffith play is A Fool and a Girl: A Dramatic Composition of Five Acts, which was copyrighted October 5, 1906.

The collection is arranged by author and playscript title.
